THE KANSAS ELECTION.

Frauds in the Canvass—Action of Governor Walker in regard to them.

From the Lawrence (Kansas) Herald of Freedom, Oct. 17.

Among the multiplicity of reports hourly reaching us of frauds in the late elections, the interference of Missourians, soldiers voting, and other grave charges against Governor WALKER, we have thought it but just to the Governor and the public that we should inquire into them, and give our readers the result of our own investigations. Our purpose has been to arrive at the truth, not to shield the Governor or any person acting in concert with him from deserved censure.

The first charge against Governor WALKER represents that he had labored to induce a Missourian by the name of HERNDON to vote at Kickapoo. When we heard the report we pronounced it false, because we felt it was in violation of his instructions from the President, and diametrically opposite to all his pledges made repeatedly to the Free State party and the public generally, and his expressions to us personally. While at Lecompton, the other day we chanced to meet Lieut. CARR of the United States Army, a gentleman from New-York, of unimpeachable integrity, and a personal acquaintance of ours. Lieut. CARR, we believe is the aid of the Governor, and has generally accompanied his Excellency on his tours through the Territory. The Lieutenant states that he was with Gov. W. at Kickapoo, and that he was present at the interview with the Governor and Mr. HERNDON. Gov. WALKER inquired of Mr. H. if he had voted. The latter replied that he had not; that he was a resident of Missouri. "Then," said the Governor, "you have no right to vote." This expression is in keeping with Gov. W.'s action and advice in regard to foreign interference in our elections, and agrees with his late address over his own signature, and to the fact that in carrying out the spirit of the address he had placed troops at the instance of the Free-State party, at five points in Kansas, contiguous to the Missouri line, to prevent frauds upon the citizens, and particularly against voting by Missourians. It will be seen, then, that the above story is wholly false, and if reported was gotten up for effect.

Let us state here, that we were informed weeks ago by Pro-Slavery men, and by persons from Leavenworth and other places along the border, that immediately after the October election a concerted movement would be made by the Pro-Slavery Party to get rid of Governor WALKER. This information we have communicated repeatedly to friends, and to the Governor himself. Of course we had no knowledge of the mode of attack; but we felt confident it would be made. We firmly believe that if Mr. HERNDON, or any other men, are making such gross misrepresentations against Governor WALKER, they are doing it for effect; that it is a part of the great plan for getting his Excellency out of the way; and that they are laboring to make cats' paws of the Free-State Party in their dirty work, and from present appearances are likely to be quite successful. The Pro-Slavery Party in the past have not hesitated to resort to fraud and falsehood, and even perjury, to carry out their ends. The tendency of their late gross frauds has not been to give them a better character. We would earnestly caution the public that they be not too hasty in condemning the Governor on flying rumors, and newspaper reports; nor even volunteered and extra-judicial affidavits; for good men have been lied down, and others may be. There is danger of striking down our best friends when we allow such instrumentalities to be employed successfully in crushing them.

SOLDIERS VOTING.

It is stated that a large number of United States troops voted under Governor WALKER's directions at Kickapoo, and the Leavenworth Times devotes a column and a half to that subject. Let us state the facts as we understand them:

When Governor WALKER wrote his late address to the people of Kansas, it had been contended, first, that no person could vote at the recent elections without having paid a tax. The Pro-Slavery Grand Jury of Lecompton some two months ago, had so decided in the matter to Judge CATO; he concurred most fully in that opinion. Attorney-General WILEY coincided in an elaborate argument. Under this formidable weight of authority Governor WALKER addressed the Government at Washington stating most emphatically his opinion that the people could vote without the payment of this tax, and his determination to act on that opinion, with the view, however, to give additional force to his own views he requested those of the President and Cabinet. Now it is manifest that if the authorities had not concurred with Governor WALKER in his views, they must have recalled him, and, therefore, he put his office and position at stake on this question, for the benefit of the people of Kansas; but most fortunately the question was so strongly and clearly argued by the Governor that the President and all his Cabinet—as he tells us in his late address—indorsed his opinion; and if the peace of Kansas has been preserved and the PEOPLE have elected their Delegate to Congress, and their Territorial Legislature, and shall for the first time obtain control of their own affairs, we owe it most distinctly to this very just act on the part of the Governor. Now that the Governor should set about to destroy the work of his own hands seems incredible. What is the evidence to the contrary? It is said that the Governor interfered so far as to direct the troops, as stated above, to vote at Kickapoo against the Free-State Party. We would here ask, inasmuch as Governor WALKER had 2,100 troops under his command, why he did not induce them all to vote instead of the forty, as alleged, at Kickapoo only? Now we believe the facts will turn out to be substantially as follows: When Gov. W. was preparing his address as to the qualification of voters, the first question which naturally presented itself to his consideration was this: As the organic act permits the Territorial Legislature of Kansas to prescribe the qualification of voters at every election but the first, does the proviso or the organic act prohibit soldiers and persons attached to the army "by reason of their being on service therein" from voting at the first, or all subsequent elections? This question was decided in our favor, as his address fully shows. Now the Territorial enactment of Feb. 20, 1857, declares that "all citizens of the United States, who have resided in the Territory six months before the election, and none other, shall be permitted to vote." The question: how was this organic law to be reconciled with the Territorial act on this point? We understand that they were reconciled thus: that soldiers and persons attached to the army could not vote "by reason of their being on service therein," but if they possessed all the qualification of voters independent of such service, and were citizens of the United States, and had a bona fide residence of six months next preceding the election in the Territory, they had a right to vote, under the Territorial law. That is, if a soldier, teamster, or mechanic resided with his family in Missouri, he should not vote by reason of his being on service here; but if such soldier, teamster or mechanic was a bona fide resident here, independent of such service, especially if prior to his enlistment, and had no other residence but this for the six months next preceding the election he had a right to vote, not as a soldier, but as a resident citizen.

These, too, were Gov. REEDER'S views, as we chance to know, under the same organic law, as several officers at Fort Riley were permitted to vote as early as 1855, under the same constitution; and this right has never been previously questioned. Gov. W., however, as we understand, did not wish the soldiers to vote; indeed, we are told, when this question was discussed at Fort Leavenworth for several days preceding the election, Gov. W. expressed a hope that the soldiers would not vote, though he gave no orders on the subject, and had no right to give any. Now, how did any of them come to vote? We may state, the election having passed off quietly at Leavenworth on the first day, and going off with equal quietness on the second, the Governor, as we understand from Lieut. CARR, some time after dinner on the second day, rode to Kickapoo, not to participate in any barbecue, for none was given there; not to take any part in the election, nor to interfere in any way in the proceedings, but to see that everything was passing off quietly there, and then to return to the Fort. Shortly after arriving at Kickapoo, as we have the statement from Lieut. CARR, the Governor was informed that several soldiers who had obtained leave of absence from the camp had voted, and they had actually voted the Free-State ticket. Governor WALKER was then urged by citizens to withdraw the expression of his wishes in order that the other soldiers, if they desired, might also participate in the election. After considerable delay and hesitation, he did consent, provided those soldiers only should vote, who, independent of their being in the service, had the citizenship and evidence required by law. And a few of them, our Free-State friends say, to the number of 49, did vote; but how they voted, or for whom, Governor W. declares, as Lieutenant CARR states, he never knew, and does not know how they voted, as the Governor rode away immediately to the Fort, and the election was then drawing to a close; but even if they all voted the Pro-Slavery ticket, which is absolutely denied, it would not change the result, either for Delegate to Congress, or Territorial Legislature, or any county officer.

Lieut. CARR also states that none of the officers went to the polls, and that they did not even intimate to the men which way their own political proclivities lay, but only gave permission to go to the polls to such men as desired it, and their opinion is that not more than 25 did go.

But how as to Johnson County, which does not change the result as regards the Territorial Legislature? Why, Governor WALKER, at the request of the Free-State Party, sent a strong force, consisting of a battery and three companies of artillery, equal to a force of 1,200 men, under the command of Col. BROOKS, formerly of Massachusetts, himself a Free-State man, to Shawnee, in Johnson County, the supposed point of danger, to prevent illegal voting, especially from Missouri. Westport, in Missouri, but three miles distant from the Shawnee Precinct, was the anticipated point for the concentration of the Missourians, and from this point, originally, they intended to come. This was evident from previous experience, as well as from what occurred before and after the election. Col. BROOKS arrived at Shawnee the day before the election. When Col. B. arrived he stated that he was called upon by the celebrated Col. TITUS, and also by a Mr. ANDERSON, of Westport, who complained bitterly of the stationing of the troops there, and said that "The people would be compelled to vote at the point of the bayonet."

Col. B., however, remained firm at his post, exhibiting Gov. W.'s address against foreign voters as his letter of instructions. What followed? Why the Missourians changed their place of voting and went on the second day to Oxford, which is twelve miles distant from Shawnee, and some fifteen from Westport, a point directly on the borders of Missouri opposite the town of Little Santa Fe. Here the fraud was perpetrated, not on the first, but quietly on the second day of the election. Indeed we do not believe any of these votes were given, but were merely entered and counted as such, as appears by the certificates on file at Lecompton, to the number of 1,538 on this second day, which was impossible, or even one-half that number, to be polled on one day. Now it is upon the Oxford precinct of Johnson county that a majority, of the votes for the Territorial Delegates to Congress, probably, and certainly a majority of the delegates to the Territorial Legislature will turn. If this Oxford precinct is rejected, the PEOPLE will have the Delegate and the Territorial Legislature, and the result will mainly depend upon the action of Gov. Walker. If he is true to the solemn pledges contained in his inaugural address, in his Topeka speeches, and his late proclamation on the tax question, he will reject this fraudulent return with scorn and indignation. This we firmly believe he will do from his past course. Indeed if he did not wish the people to rule Kansas, why did he issue his address on the tax question, which address, if we do succeed, issued under the most trying circumstances, will have given us peace and victory?

We are happy to learn that a protest has been signed and forwarded to the Governor and Secretary in regard to these Oxford returns, which will be found in another column. If the Governor proves false to his pledges, and not till then, will be the time to seek other modes of redress.

If the last resort of Freemen shall become necessary, let us at least first know whether Governor WALKER will not do his whole duty, and render the last alternative unnecessary.

Let us have our right, "peaceably if we can, forcibly if we must."

Protest Against the Frauds in Johnson County.

To His Excellency R. J. Walker, Governor, and Hon. Frederick P. Stanton, Secretary of the Territory of Kansas:

The undersigned, citizens of the Sixth Council and Tenth Representative Districts, in the said Territory of Kansas, beg leave respectfully to represent, that at the election held on the 5th inst. for Delegate to Congress, members of the Legislative Assembly and other public offices, gross frauds were committed in the returns for Oxford Precinct, by which a large number of votes, to wit: about 1,626 were returned, purporting to be polled at that Precinct, where, your memorialists have good cause to believe, and do believe, there were not to exceed 100 legal votes. They have information in which they place full confidence, that on the 5th day of October there were only about 91 votes polled; that on the day following, when it is purported some 1,538 votes were polled, there were no considerable number of persons in attendance or around the polls through the day; indeed they have information that not to exceed from twenty to thirty persons were around the polls of the said Oxford Precinct at any time during the 6th day of October. They would further state that they have satisfactory evidence that the population of Johnson County is too sparse to contain a population so great as is represented to be polled at that Precinct. They are assured, too, that a vast majority of the names attached to the returns are not known in Johnson County. To this they would add the fact that the said Oxford Precinct is situated on the borders of the Territory, within a few rods of the Territorial line, and that the town of Little Santa Fe, in Missouri, is contiguous to said Precinct, and that if any such number of votes were polled, your memorialists believe they were polled by non-residents of the Territory of Kansas. They also are confident that such a large number of votes could not have been polled at one Precinct, and by any one set of officers within the time limited by law.

We would also state that Johnson County, and Oxford precinct in particular, is within the limits of an Indian Territory, which is specially reserved by the organic act out of the Territory of Kansas: that such Territory was unopen for legal settlement on the 5th and 6th days of October last, and remains the same at this time, and that no legal settlements can be made within said reservation now, nor could not on the day, nor at any time prior to said election.

Your memorialists, legal voters of said Representative and Council Districts, would respectfully PROTEST against the vote of said Oxford precinct being counted in the returns for the Eighth Council and Tenth Representative Districts, or for Delegate to Congress, for the reasons of fraud and illegality set forth in the above, and for other reasons which may appear. They ask his Excellency the Governor, and his Honor the Secretary, to take such action as their judgment may suggest, to inquire into the truth of our said allegations, and to do such other things in the premises as will secure us against fraud, and give to the actual bona fide residents of the Territory and Districts a voice in directing their own affairs. All of which is respectfully submitted.

INQUIRY INTO THE FRAUDULENT VOTING.

The Herald of Freedom says:

Gov. WALKER and Secretary STANTON were on Wednesday on their way to the border, to inquire in person in regard to the fraudulent election returns from the Oxford precinct, in Johnson county. They exhibit the poll books, which are upward of 40 feet in length. On inquiry they found, as they report, about 120 of the first votes polled, residents of the county; the balance of the names are unknown to anybody in the region, and are merely fictitious names, entered for the occasion.

Proclamation of Governor Walker—The Returns from Oxford Precinct Thrown Out.

[BY TELEGRAPH.]

ST. LOUIS, Monday, Oct. 26.

A protest, signed by several prominent citizens of Kansas, was filed on the 15th inst. against the fraudulent returns from Oxford Precinct, Johnston County; and in reply to it, after a personal examination, Messrs. WALKER and STANTON publish a proclamation in the Herald of Freedom of the 20th, in which they express a determination to reject the entire vote of Oxford, and to give certificates to the Free-State candidates.

The proclamation produced intense excitement amongst the extreme Pro-Slavery men, and threats of vengeance against Governor WALKER and Secretary STANTON were made.

On the 19th inst., a protest was made against assembling the Constitutional Convention, by a Mass Convention of the people at Lecompton.

The Central America.

The Executive Committee appointed to distribute the Central America relief fund have decided to make donations to the Captain, officers and crew of the brig Marine, of Boston, as follows: Captain, $600; first officer, $100; second officer, $80; first cook, $70; second cook, $50; four seamen, $20 each; also a gold watch to the Captain, and a silver medal to each of the officers.

The sum of two hundred dollars has been contributed by the children in the public schools of Cincinnati to the fund for the relief of the family of Lieut. HERNDON, of the lost Central America.

A special commission has been organized, under the auspices of the New-York Board of Underwriters, to inquire into and report upon the causes of the loss of the Central America. The commission was organized about a fortnight ago, but its sessions have been secret; and, therefore, no satisfactory information can be obtained relative to its proceedings. At its head is Commodore M. C. PERRY, U. S. N., and associated with him are Capt. EZRA NYE, formerly commander of the late Collins steamship Pacific, and the Presidents of several of the Insurance Companies. Mr. I. W. UPTON is Secretary of the commission. The sessions are held daily at the Insurance Buildings, corner of Wall and William streets, and the questions propounded to witnesses, and the answers thereto, are reduced to writing. Among the witnesses who have been examined are Mr. FRAZER, Mr. BLACK, Mr. ASHBY and Mr. MCCARTY, (the engineer of one of the Pacific Mail Steamship Company's steamers,) who was on board the Central America at the time of the disaster.

The Storm.

The wind yesterday morning was from N. N. E., with occasional rain. During Sunday night it blew at intervals from N. E. very heavy. The vessels at anchor in the North River and at Quarantine dragged their anchors, but without receiving any damage. The tide, in consequence of the N. E. wind, was very high, flooding a number of the piers on the east side of the town. A quantity of flour on Pier No. 7 received considerable damage from the heavy rain. Several cellars on the East and North Rivers are filled with water. We do not learn of any damage received by the vessels at the piers.

FOUND DROWNED.—The body of an unknown man was found yesterday, floating in the dock foot of Fulton Ferry. He had on a black frock coat, dark pants and cloth vest, and was about thirty years of age, and appeared to have been in the water but a short time. From having a pair of scissors in his pocket, he is supposed to have been a clerk, or a tailor, or a mails' reader on a newspaper.

HOSTILE DECLARATIONS AGAINST THE GOVERNMENT.

ST. LOUIS, Monday, Oct. 26.

The Republican publishes a discourse delivered by HEBER C. KIMBALL, of Salt Lake City, Aug. 30, in which strong grounds are taken against the United States Government, and a determination is expressed to resist their troops to the last extremity. The Mormon "Children" are called upon to arm themselves, and people generally are exhorted to lay up grain and otherwise prepare for the conflict. During the discourse, KIMBALL says: "We are the kingdom of God and the State of Deseret, and will have BRIGHAM YOUNG for Governor just so long as he lives."

YOUNG made a speech equally bold in its declarations of hostility against the United States.

Robbery in New-Haven, Conn.

NEW-HAVEN, Monday, Oct. 26.

Capt. GEORGE S. HINE, at 4 o'clock this morning, while on his way to his schooner, the Isabella Dart, bound for Albany, had a bag thrown over his head by two men, who then robbed him of $1,220. Of this sum there were five $100 bills of the Blackstone Bank, R. I.; two $100 bills of the Quinnipiac Bank, and one $100 bill of the Mechanics' Bank of New-Haven. The robbers are yet undiscovered.

The Manufacture of Bread.

The importance of having clean, wholesome and healthy bread, produced with economy and dispatch, cannot be overrated, and as our attention has lately been called to the apparatus of M. ROLLAND, which is now used extensively in France, and also throughout the continent of Europe, and to a limited extent in this City, we have deemed it pertinent to present the features of its claimed superiority. In the first place, by ROLLAND'S process, the dough is prepared in a mechanical kneading trough, which consists of a hollow wooden cylinder, lined with plates of tinned iron, or made entirely of plate and cast iron, with a horizontal axis resting on each of the ends, or lateral faces, and armed with two rows of curved blades, alternately long and short. These blades, perpendicular or oblique to the axis, form two tracks, or frames of open work, curved in opposite directions and regularly arranged in counterpart. The whole is put in motion by a fly-wheel and crank, which can be turned by a man without difficulty. This trough answers as well for the preparation of the raising as for the making of the dough. Its operation is as prompt as it is effectual. In fifteen minutes it transforms more than a barrel of flour into a dough perfectly uniform and light, free from lumps and dry pellets of flour, which hand-kneading will never do. As all parts of the dough are worked at the same time, the whole mass of flour necessarily becomes promptly and accurately mingled with the water. Evaporation is thus prevented, and not the smallest particle of flour can be lost. But the advantages of this system are not only in the saving of labor and material, or in the superior manner in which the work is performed, but also in the cleanliness of the bread, as it is free from all the impurities of the hand, or more shameful practice of feet-kneading—as perspiration, saliva, etc. And as the dough is perfectly and uniformly kneaded, it is always the same in quality.

A hot-air oven, with a revolving floor, is the remaining feature of the Rolland apparatus, which is arranged as follows: it is of a circular form, and heated by means of an independent furnace, which thus admits of any combustible material being used. From this furnace the smoke circulates around the inclosure reserved for the baking of the bread, by means of cast-iron tubes in the lower part, vertical flues laid in the thickness of the walls, and a double metallic ceiling, which supersedes the top, or upper part, of the old ovens. The bottom part is moved horizontally and vertically, and constitutes a revolving platform of iron-work, covered with a layer of baked clay. A handle, or winch, very easily transmits to the pivots of this floor the movement of rotation, and brings successively to the mouth of the oven, within sight of the eye and reach of the hand, the place which each loaf should occupy. The distribution of the heat is perfect; a thermometer measures its intensity, and indicates, in an invariable manner, the moment at which the bread ought to be put into the oven. A gas-burner or a lamp, placed in one of its sides, throws its rays constantly into the interior of the oven. The baking is perfect, regular and continuous; every loaf is exposed at the same time to the heat of the oven, and there being no embers or ashes for the crust to come in contact with, it is always strictly clean. In comparison with the common system of baking, the advantages of the Rolland Oven is, in a discontinuance of the drying of wood before heating; the means of making use of every kind of combustible material; spontaneous collection of the living embers, doing away with the fatigue of drawing them out, while the excessive heat endangers the health of the workmen; wonderful economy in the expense of heating; suppression of many risks of fire; discontinuance of the laborious cleanings of the floor of the oven at every operation; an easier plan of putting in and drawing the bread out of the oven; shorter and more manageable implements, and a more suitable system of lighting; a baking which is regular, capable of being prolonged, and very easy to manage; the production of loaves free from all traces of ashes, coal or fluerage—in a word, a very good quality, with a fine appearance and perfect cleanliness; heating of the water necessary for the preparation of the dough by means of heat which, by the old plan, is lost; lastly, a wonderful saving of labor, most readily appreciable in large concerns.

Although in very general use in France, and to a certain extent in England, Austria, Venetia, Croatia, Istria, Dalmatia, Bohemia, Hungary, Lombardy, Belgium, Prussia, Sardinia, Switzerland, Turkey, Africa, Egypt, the Brazils, etc., yet from circumstances the apparatus of M. ROLLAND has not been extensively introduced in the United States. However, the patents having now passed into the hands of most responsible parties, who will present the subject in its proper light, there can be no reasonable doubt of its very extensive adoption. In fact, practical bakers, who will give this kneader and oven a careful inspection, will be readily convinced of their superiority over any other means for the perfect and economical production of bread. The machinery and process have been examined by many scientific bodies and Boards of Government officers, and in every instance have received the highest approbation. The Academy of Sciences, of the Institute of France, appointed a special commission who practically tested these inventions of M. ROLLAND. The decision was most elaborate in their favor, and the result was that at the exhibition of the Society for the Encouragement of National Industry, at its general meeting on the 11th of August, 1852, was awarded M. ROLLAND a Platina Medal.

The resident owners of M. ROLLAND'S patents for the United States are A. BERNARD, Esq., civil engineer, No. 51 Dey-street, and ELIAS PONVERT, Esq., merchant, No. 67 Water-street. Either of these gentlemen will exhibit and give detailed descriptions of the apparatus and the process pursued. The kneader and oven are also on exhibition at the Fair of the American Institute in the Crystal Palace.

Oh, the Weather!

If the political season was never, as people say, known to be so dull as in the present Fall campaign,—if, in other words, the panic has killed politics,—we can readily believe that for the last three days the weather has garroted the panic. It may recover again—it undoubtedly will; but it has suffered a severe encounter, and got the worst of it. As is said of young children, when a new baby is born, its "nose has been put out of joint." The main topic yesterday, as far as our observation has extended,—(and we dispatched a crowd of reporters to the business part of the City, to pick up facts and draw conclusions,)—was not the scarcity of money, but the lack of umbrellas.

It began to rain early on Saturday night, and at this present writing, midnight on Monday, there has been no cessation. People interested in suspension of specie, are now praying for suspension of rain. What with the panic and the weather together, our country readers may imagine, if they can, the countenances of their town cousins, and the deserted condition of the streets. Ladies cannot even get abroad to assist a tradesman in ruining himself and family by selling goods fifty per cent. below cost price. The gutters are converted into conduits. The narrow streets in the lower part of the town are become canals, from which those of us who have not traveled may get some idea of Venice. Actually, for three days we have now been enduring some of the most exceptional weather we have ever had to afflict us, though taken as a panacea for the panic,—as a subject of conversation and complaint, affording relief to the monotonous grumbling about "Hard Times," it is quite refreshing and beneficial.

Amusements.

LAURA KEENE'S THEATRE.—A play of remarkable denseness, and unusual specific gravity was produced here last night. It is called "Birds of Prey," and comes from the pen of M. WRAY, who, according to the play-bill, is "a young dramatic author of great promise,"—fortunately, for us, located in London. We do not usually find fault with the judgment of Miss KEENE; her selection of pieces is excellent, more particularly so, when we consider the number which she produces at her handsome little house. But in the present instance we do most positively object to the humiliation of her artists; want only to humiliated in the production of a piece wherein they cannot by any possibility appear to advantage.

We presume that "Birds of Prey" is Mr. WRAY'S first work. It bears evidence of intense elaboration, but it is the elaboration of dullness; the laborious effort to strike fire out of lead. We suspect, too, that the play has been cut down extensively, and imagine that in its original form it must have been at least twelve acts long. It would take that, we should fancy, to satisfy the author's sense of proportion, judging by the skeleton preserved by Miss KEENE, which is as remarkable for its natural cavities as for its unnatural dryness.

We have no desire to speak critically of a work which is beneath criticism. It is sufficient to say that "Birds of Prey" is intended to be an intense drama of the ultra French school; that it is crowded with inconsistencies; that it is constructed on no known principles of dramatic progression; that its characterizations are utterly absurd; and finally, that as a whole it is the most cheerless mass of boyish inconsistency and twaddle that has ever been put on this stage. The plot is so incomprehensible that an audience of Philadelphia lawyers would fail to make anything of it. We presume that the manuscript has some merit not perceptible from the footlights. How otherwise can we account for its production by Miss KEENE?

It is not necessary to speak of the acting, except that it saved the second act, and was as good as could be expected under the circumstances.

The Carmen and the Times.

If it were possible for any one to doubt the hardness of the times, and the almost general suspension of business, the skeptic, whoever he might be, would only have to take a survey of the business portion of the City south of Wall-street. He might fancy at first that the Mayor had enforced the City ordinance against encumbering the sidewalks, for nowhere in such streets as Broad, Beaver, Pearl, Exchange-place, or any thoroughfare in that locality, will he be in danger of striking his shins against huge pine boxes, or tumbling headforemost over bales of goods. Nor, if he is in a hurry, will his patience be put to proof by having to wait while a cart backed up to the door of a warehouse, delivers its load. He may adopt almost any rate of speed he chooses with little danger of being brought to a halt. But while such is the case with the sidewalk, it is altogether otherwise with the road. There idle carts are congregated like rowdies round a Sixth Ward groggery door. Our Reporter on the last fair day counted thirty-six of them in Broad-street, in the block between Wall-street and Exchange-place, while in the same space there were but four carts having goods upon them. Between Exchange-place and Beaver-street business was a little more brisk, inasmuch as there were only eighteen unemployed carts, and as many as seven engaged in delivering or removing goods. From Broad, at the corner of Stone-street, a brisk business seemed going on in the flour trade, no less than nine carts being engaged in removing flour and grain from the stores of VAN SYCKEL & Co. and LANE & MANGAM'S. In Beaver-street there were thirty-seven carts unemployed, and only five employed, while in Pearl-street the number of unemployed carts was so great that our Reporter missed an accurate computation.

The drivers of these carts uniformly state that never within their recollection have the times at this season of the year, when a brisk Fall business ought to be going on, been so dull. Usually in this month the difficulty is for merchants to find carts. Now, the cartmen can scarcely find at any hour of the day a single merchant that requires his services. The outlook in the coming Winter, for this class of useful and hard-working men, is very drear indeed.

Progress of Business Elsewhere—Charitable Movements.

The Massachusetts Corporation run their works four days in the week, and have stock in hand to last till January. The Boston Traveller contradicts the report that the Directors have voted to stop.

The Salisbury Manufacturing Company have reduced the pay of operatives 15 per cent.

Conger's paper mill at Bloomfield, N. J., has resumed operations, and the pasteboard and oakum factory of WHEELER & Co., in the same town, is also about to resume.

The Essex paper mills, which recently discharged some hands, and reduced the wages of others, will shortly resume full work and full pay.

The Norfolk Argus says: "We have been pained to chronicle two heavy discharges of workmen from the Gosport Navy-Yard within a week, and we fear, without aid from the Government in the shape of an immediate order for the building of the steam sloop which the Department has determined to have built here, there will be more to follow.

The Philadelphia Ledger intimates that a number of employers, in that city, who discharged their hands in a panic, are recovering from their fright, and are beginning to ask whether they are not likely to be losers by their stoppage of work. They prove not to have been so badly hurt as they thought. There is a prospect of speedy resumption in several quarters.

The Germans of Philadelphia held a mass meeting on Sunday in reference to the times. The call for the meeting was inflammatory, but the proceedings were peaceable. A Committee of twenty-five was appointed to concert further measures, and another meeting is to be held on Friday.

A Philadelphia baker, benevolently disposed, announces that he will distribute to the poor 500 loaves of bread every Wednesday and Saturday during the Winter.

It is announced in St. John, N. B., that in future the Government of that Province will draw specie from England instead of bills. The coffers of all the banks have likewise been stiffly replenished to meet any demand that might be likely to be made upon them. There is more specie now in the city than there has been for many years.

A sewing-machine establishment in Philadelphia proffers to the Benevolent Societies of the city the free use of its rooms and machinery until the first of February, to make up clothing for the poor.

Young Men's Christian Association.

The monthly meeting of this Association was held on Monday evening at the Chapel of the University. Mr. CEPHAS BRAINARD was called to the Chair, and Mr. EUGENE THOMPSON was elected Secretary. After the usual introductory exercises new members were proposed. The Corresponding Secretary stated that a meeting of 600 had been held in Lawrence, Mass., and addressed by the Mayor. Reports from Belfast, Ireland, were made that an encouraging work was going on in that city and its vicinity. EDWARD CORDEROY, Esq., a Vice-President of the London association, had arrived on a visit to the Christian Association of this country. Dr. COSSON, from the American Sunday School Union, made a report in relation to the Madall family at Florence, and the Protestant families in France; he also presented the plan of a new chapel, to be built in Paris. He advised that there should be unity among all Protestants abroad, of every denomination, using the Episcopal service and the dissenting service alternately. This was now done in some cases, and with favorable results. The following resolution was passed:

"That there be a Committee of five to confer with the American and Foreign Christian Union, respecting the proposed action of that Society in the purchase of chapels for the use of Protestants in Paris."

Rev. THEODORE L. CUYLER, lately returned from Europe, whither he went as a delegate of the Association, addressed the meeting. He described his visits to the London Bible Classes, Christian Associations, Ragged Schools and Sabbath Schools of London, where he saw some things which he wished adopted among the Christian young men of this City. He particularly eulogized the social manner in which John Bull mingles his tea and toast with his religion as well as his business, on which he has grown stout. He also wished to see a system of lectures adopted here akin to the Annual Exeter Hall Lectures, in which the first men in church and state took an active part. If the young men of our City were to be saved from Negro buffoonery and the tiers of the Theatre, the doors of library and lecture rooms must be thrown wide open.

Notwithstanding the moist nature of the weather, there was a full and deeply interested meeting.

The Synod of Virginia on Slavery.

We have previously noticed the resolution of the Virginia Synod to withdraw from further connection with the General Assembly of the New-School Presbyterian Church. The Synod subsequently resolved to coöperate in the organization of the "United Synod," to meet at Knoxville in April next. Among the prominent debaters was Rev. Dr. BOYD, who has occupied a leading position throughout this controversy.

Action was also taken on the affairs of the American Tract Society. The Synod was addressed by Rev. JONATHAN CROSS, General Agent of the Society for the State of Maryland, and, after he had been awarded a hearing, the following resolution was adopted:

That since the recent action of the Executive Committee of the American Tract Society, to adhere strictly to the letter and spirit of the constitution of said Society, we recommend the objects and agents of the Society to the continued confidence of the Churches.

The final determination of the Synod in reference to secession is in the form of a declaration, bearing the following signatures: J. N. Danforth, J. D. Mitchell, O. Treadwell, A. H. H. Boyd, J. R. Grattan, and William Herring.

Should the Knoxville meeting resolve upon a separate organization, there will then be five divisions of the Presbyterian Church in the United States—the Old and New Schools, and the Richmond, Missouri and Knoxville splits. The latest splits are all from the New School body—the Old School, from which the New itself was separated twenty years ago, having since that time refused to entertain the question of Slavery at the meetings of the General Assembly. The next convocation of the New School Assembly will probably show a considerable diminution in numbers.

Captain Parmalee, of the Middlesex.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I find, in the TIMES of this morning, that Mr. JAMES REA avows himself the author of the charges of cruelty made in a previous communication against Captain PARMALEE, of the ship Middlesex, during her voyage from Liverpool in February last.

As Capt. P. sailed for Liverpool a week ago, he cannot reply to Mr. REA'S letter, in which these charges are repeated. I desire, therefore, merely to call the attention of the public to the fact that he has already given them an explicit denial, in a letter published under his own signature, in the TIMES of the 19th inst.; and no one who knows him will believe him capable either of making false statements or of cruelty to any human being. As Capt. P. acknowledged in his card, there was severe punishment inflicted upon the sailors of the Middlesex,—but no more than was absolutely necessary to compel them to do work without which the hundreds of her passengers, Mr. JAMES REA included, must inevitably have gone to the bottom. Mr. R. speaks lightly of the perils of the voyage, and the damage to the ship, now, when he is safe ashore, through the efforts of the very man whom he defames and slanders:—but he did not think so then.

What private wrongs Mr. REA may fancy he has sustained at Capt. P.'s hands I do not know. The question is narrowed down to one of veracity between the two,—and there I am quite willing to leave it, as will be also every

FRIEND OF CAPT. PARMALEE.

The Nicaraguan Minister.

NEW-YORK, Saturday, Oct. 24, 1857.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

I find in your paper a communication over the signature of "Carlos," a pretended Nicaraguan, insinuating that Mr. IRISARRI, Minister from Guatemala and Salvador, and also appointed representative of Nicaragua, has been sold, as well as General JEREZ, to Mr. WHITE. Turn the wheel, and the sale will be Mr. Black, and Brown, and Red,—since any name is good for a purchaser,—good as that of "Carlos," Nicaraguanized by the wand of the Omnipotent WALKER.

With ineffable pleasure this Don "Carlos" perceives that the Government of the United States will not recognize the actual Government of Nicaragua, and in this, he is a Walkerite indeed, since among them there is no other Government for Nicaragua than that of WALKER.

But "Carlos" developes new ideas in Democracy. He would have foreign Ministers appointed by the people; hence, in his view, from the time of FRANKLIN to that of SOULE, no United States Minister has been legally appointed. He insists, also, that the embassadors of a Republic should have been upon its soil; and in accordance with this principle neither GALLATIN, SOULE, BELMONT, SULLIVAN, nor others who, like them, were not born in the United States, had any right to the positions which they have filled. Nor should Nicaragua have been represented by MARCOLETTA, Costa Rica by the two MOLINAS, nor Chile and Salvador by IRISARRI, who had the right to represent only Guatemala. This idea of "Carlos" may be good, politic and geographical, but it is not Nicaraguan, for in that Republic the Central Americans by birth are eligible to any office, even to the Presidency. Such was the case with the legitimately-elected President Don FRUTO CHAMORRO, like IZTARRI, a Guatemalian.

And now, Mr. Editor, in order that your journal may not resemble the statue of PASQUINO, pray give these lines a place in answer to the letter of "Carlos I." that the anti-lots may have as free course as the bans. Respectfully, yours,

CARLOS II.

Charitable Relief.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

My attention has been called to an inquiry in your issue of the 23d inst., over the signature of "Raiment," as to the proper places to send cast-off clothing, &c., for distribution among the needy. You answer the inquiry by naming the "Children's Aid Society," a most excellent Association and admirably conducted; but permit me to draw attention to the efforts of St. George's Mission, connected with the Chapel of that name, corner of Beekman and Cliff streets. Situated in the midst of a population, that, perhaps, more than any other, need the kind offices and charitable gifts of those who have them to spare, its Directors will thankfully receive gifts of clothing of every description, and apply them to the relief of the many and now daily increasing applicants for relief. All goods sent to the Mission Office of St. George's Chapel, corner of Beekman and Cliff-streets, will be thankfully acknowledged. W. N. D.

THE CAUSES OF THE PANIC.

An Interesting and Instructive Letter from a Business Man.

PHILADELPHIA, Thursday, Oct. 22, 1857.

MY DEAR SIR: Your favor is at hand, complaining that the various dissertations on the present financial epidemic have so unsettled your views as to its causes that you desire a diagnosis from some other quarter. Your polite request for me to act as consulting physician, calls up sensations similar to those which that medical student must have felt who, because his master had shrewdly detected a patient in eating oysters by seeing the shells u der the bed, asserted on another occasion that the pat ent had eaten a horse, and when pressed for a reason, said he saw a saddle under the bed. Our patient—and it is the worst symptoms that I notice—is suffering from a derangement of the nervous system, produced partly by dissipation and partly by terror. He has evidently lived fast—has drank much bad liquor, read bad newspapers, and what is equally injurious, injured his moral sense by accustoming himself to call that good which in his heart he knew to be evil. If you ask me how I know all this, I point to the ulcers in the shape of defalcations, forgeries and perjuries that have broken out over his body.

To drop metaphor, in my opinion the present panic is a stockjobber's panic, superinduced and invited by imprudent mercantile investments. Doubtless an unsafe and ununiform currency is an evil; doubtless the present Tariff could be materially improved for the advancement of our manufactures; but neither currency nor the Tariff, I suspect, are responsible for the present crisis. No, Sir, "the Assyrian came down like the wolf on the fold." Singular as it may sound, no people on the face of the earth have such an ultra-monomaniacal aversion to spare cash as our "free and enlightened" citizens. In portions of Continental Europe there are severe penalties for insolvency, and these tend to preserve a wholesome respect for surplus cash. In England, their crisis of 1847 gave them some important ideas on the subject. But our people, in spite of everything, even in spite of my Treatise on Business, (see pages 108–114) and in spite or defiance of panics, pay no attention whatever to maintain a due and safe proportion between cash and liabilites, nor do they seem to realize there can be any danger in converting floating into fixed capital. Take an inventory of the nominal assets of all the traders and merchants, from the retailers at the cross-roads to our bank sheet importers, and what proportion do you suppose the cash on hand will average to the liabilities? Less than Falstaff's ha'pence worth of bread bore to his quantity of sack. What will represent the cash? I fear real estate. Western wild lands, brownstone stores and houses—will represent part of it, and railroad liabilities will represent another part. Now, if these are mercantile securities—cash equivalents—the investment is justifiable, whether it proved profitable or not—but where was real estate or railroad liabilities ever recognized as mercantile securities?

Again, our manufacturers are not less uneasy than the rest of us when they have cash on hand, and very few of them can sleep contented until they have reinvested almost their last dollar in new improvements, additions to buildings, machinery, or some fixture. Now paper money, whatever its effects on prices, can surely have nothing to do with this national peculiarity, nor can I see how it is responsible for the fact that merchants will invest their cash means in non-mercantile securities and do business on credit. Banks, so far from encouraging this disposition, discourage it by basing their discounts on the average balance of their customers, in accordance with the Scriptural principle, "To him who hath much, much shall be given." Banks, it seems to me, are among the principal sufferers by this crisis, but they are not the prime agents of it.

Now, what is the effect of converting floating into fixed capital, and multiplying liabilities without regard to any cash basis? One result is that money is diverted from its regular channels—in fact, taken out of the money market and distributed in small sums. Another result is that a few men monopolize a certain business, and each one does insecurely and imperfectly what ten men ought to do, and would do, in a safe and moderate way. Another result is that bills receivable are the sole reliance for meeting bills payable, and upon any default in the former, the merchant passes first to the money-lenders and eventually ails. Merchandising thus amounts simply to taking goods on sale, and when and if they are sold, and the money obtained, they will be paid for. The real bona fide capital being locked up in unavailable securities, real estate, railroads, &c., and the profits having been already bargained away by the ladies, perhaps principally to men who will immediately ship the cash out of the country, the whole fabric, it is evident, hangs by a thread.

But do you ask, did this state of things produce a panic? No, Sir, I think not. Under ordinary circumstances it would probably have only produced a pinching tight money market. With fair treatment the merchants would have been able to relieve themselves gradually of their non-mercantile securities, increase their cash reserve, curtail their credit operations and come out safer and sounder than ever. But a state of affairs was produced usually denominated "ticklish," as every one of any mercantile sagacity felt, and the imminence of danger was vastly increased when the New-York Banks expanded some twenty millions of dollars within a short time. The worst misfortune, however, was that it led to the formation of a large organized band of men who saw that by selling stocks "short," and hammering down the railroad interest, they could easily precipitate a crash and thereby make fortunes for themselves. Among this gang I have no doubt there were several railroad officials who had ruined their roads to benefit themselves. At all events, to effect their end, no stone was left unturned—no scheme left untried. Predictions of impending ruin were fulminated day after day, and week after week. Hints at the solvency of the banks were not forborne, and every imaginable tactics, familiar only to experienced stock gamblers, were resorted to, to encourage sellers of stocks and discourage buyers. They deserve thanks, however, for not setting fire to the City of New-York, in order to imitate the great fire of 1835. Stocks fell, as they expected and desired, and money lenders of all kinds, including banks, were compelled to call in loans made on stock collaterals. The decline in stocks weakened many mercantile houses that had invested in them, and hastened the failure of the Ohio Life and Trust Company. These events were then held up as fulfilment of their predictions, and the people becoming thoroughly frightened, threw their stocks and bonds overboard and rushed to their destruction like sheep to the slaughter. Sauve qui peut became the cry. Important failures followed, these naturally precipitated others, and such a ball once fairly set in motion rolls of itself, without any necessity to aid its downward course by pushing, or shrieks, or yells, and will continue to roll until it reaches the solid men, that is, men who can pay their debts whether those owing them pay promptly or not. The banks, inasmuch as their strength is mainly a reflex of the mercantile strength, weakened as the latter collapsed. The Philadelphia Banks hastened their overthrow by discrediting the Bank of Pennsylvania, and the centre having given way, (have not events shown that Philadelphia is the centre of finance?) it was preposterous for any outside banks to presume to stand. With the bank suspension the currency and exchanges became deranged throughout the whole country. This then, was a remote effect, not an immediate cause of the crisis. May not then the panic of 1857 be called the stock-jobbers' panic? Or, in other words, the "bears" took advantage of a period of mercantile weakness to precipitate a crash, expecting thereby to realize fortunes.

So much for my views, which you have solicited, of the causes of the crisis. If they are not worth much you can console yourself by reflecting they did not cost much. The causes are really of less practical importance just at present than a remedy, but my letter is already too long. No important relief can be expected until the money which has been scattered and distributed in small sums is aggregated again in large sums constituting capital. Whatever any one can do by inducing others to pay their debts speedily, so far as they are able, and to discourage hoarding, will hasten the "good time coming" and be a service to the community. Much may be done by the Banks by pursuing a liberal, expansive course and discounting freely produce paper. But to prevent panics in future, merchants as well as bankers must as a rule never invest their floating means in non-mercantile securities, bonds and mortgages, real estate, railroad liabilities, &c., and always maintain a reasonable proportion—not 1 to 36 a la Bowery Bank—between cash assets and liabilities. This neglected, no legislation can prevent periodical panics. Nothing, however, will be so effectual to cure the present or prevent future panics as to cultivate habitually an humble and Christian spirit, striving to obtain the favor of Him "who yokes the whirlwind to his car," yet has blessed us with a bounteous harvest, and by every indication revealed in nature, desired that the people of this country should be happy in the year 1857. Partial evil in His hands is universal good. Then, though the Winter may be bleak and chill the Spring will certainly come, and

"The flower will bless the cloud when it hath passed by."

I am, truly, your obedient servant,

EDWIN T. FREEDLEY.

Gambling at the German Spas—Close of the Season—Veterans of the First Empire—Illness of the King of Prussia—Reported Illness of the Emperor—Miscellaneous News.

From Our Own Correspondent.

PARIS, Monday, Oct. 12, 1857.

The so called health-seekers of the spas of Germany begin to return to town, evidently more recuperated in blood molecules than in molecules of gold. The totally bankrupt form a large majority of the homeward emigration. So long as their deposits held out, or so long as their friends supplied them with money—always to return home with—they stuck to the rouge-et-noir and trente et quarante, in hopes that each turn of the cards would bring them the long-waited-for revenge on the bank. And it is probable that if their friends had not ceased entirely to send supplies—to come home with—they would have stayed until the bankers shut the doors on them at the end of the season. No preceding year has afforded so many decades; they all swear vengeance for the coming season, and hope, by some combination, to break the bank that won their money. But the Count de V., who had accumulated a sum of 200,000 francs for his martingale, with the intention of breaking the Bank of Baden Baden with a final stroke, has lost all, and the bank le in ecstacies. Ems has made a million this year, Wiesbaden and Baden Baden nearly as much. The banks have had no suicides to deplore, at least within their walls, an immunity which they attribute to the extreme politeness of their company. Some one proposed to place in the various kursaals a placard bearing the words: "People are expressly prohibited from blowing their brains out in the saloons, in order not to trouble the game." But to complete this wise regulation, the kursaal ought to furnish a place where the candidate could find aid and protection in carrying out his views, as was the habit at Massilia. Or, as at Athens, where a cup of poison hemlock was always kept in readiness for bankrupt citizens. A very considerable proportion of the "caved in" travelers of this year are journalists and members of the great literary army of Paris, a fact which implies that all the proprietors of the kursaals of the Rhine, are not so kind-hearted as M. BENAZET of Baden Baden. When a squadron of these gentlemen arrived at Baden Baden together—Messrs. VILLEMEPAUT, JULES LECOMPTE, AUGUSTE VILLEMOT, EDMOND ABOUT, EUGENE GUINOT, EDMOND TEXIER, &c., &c.—M. BENAZET invited all the representatives of the Press to meet him, and held to them words to the following effect: Gentlemen, you have come here, each of you, with five hundred, a thousand, two thousand francs. You are going to play, and very probably to lose, not being able to play high. Both you and I will be displeased at this result. Play, however, if you are still disposed to; and if you gain, so much the better; but if you lose, I shall give you back your money. I leave the subject to your deliberation." The speech of M. BENAZET may have had a certain effect; but I happened to see this same group of writers playing at M. BENAZET'S bank, M. VILLEMEPAUT, who is a lucky player, taking the lead.

The Palace of the Legion of Honor presents a curious spectacle at this moment. The specimens of maimed humanity which crowd the bureaux of the Chancellerie during the hours for the distribution of the St. Helena medal, recall vividly the terrible wars through which these veterans passed. A journal recounts the story of an old woman who presented herself a few days ago for the medal. She entered the bureau on a crutch, and to the astonishment of the crowd of old soldiers present who made way for her, demanded if her papers had been examined, and whether her right to the medal had been admitted. The Clerk replied in the affirmative, and coming forward took her arm, led her to a seat, and then announced in a loud voice "THERESE FIGUEUR, alias 'Sans-Gêne,' born in 1774, at Talney, Cote d'Or, entered the 15th Dragoons on the 7th October, 1791, and retired under the Empire, in consequence of wounds: you are entitled to the medal." At these words the old woman rose, straightened herself up, shouldered her crutch at "dress arms," and gave the military salute. The medal was attached to her breast, and she marched out of the office with the cry of "Vive L'Empereur!" What mysterious, or perhaps terrible trait of character, would have gained for this woman at the early age of seventeen, the cognomen of Sans-Gêne?

On the same day an old man who has been confined in the Lunatic Asylum of Bicêtre for more than twenty-five years, presented himself for the medal. His name is MYON, he is now 80 years old, and he was formerly a dancer at the Grand Opera. When his name was called, he replied, "Here I am at your service and that of the company present. Such as you see me, I am an old artiste of the Opera. I knew [with a flourish] the great VESTRIS!" "Very likely," said the clerk "but you must have given over dancing long ago." "Excuse me," said M. MYON; and without waiting for any further reply, he cleared a place, and began moving about with such vigor that it was some time before the people in the office could stop his evolutions. He had served in the armies of the Republic and the Empire and was entitled to the medal. When he received it, he made the military salute, cut a pigeon wing, and pirouetted out of the office.

Another old man presented, as a justification of his right to a medal, a paper which certified that he had lost his arm in one of the battles of the Empire. The old soldier did not know till he was told of the fact on application for his medal, that according to a law of the first Empire, an arm lost in battle secured him the ribbon of the Legion of Honor. The medal and the decorations were conferred upon him at the same time.

ARNAL, the well-known comic actor of the Palais Royal Theatre, made two campaigns under the first Empire, and now wears the St. Helena medal.

A story is told of a man who, at the period when the medals were announced for distribution, was about to marry a young girl. The gentleman represented himself to his intended as fifty, a youthfulness to which he had brought himself by the aid of the wigmaker's and perfumer's skill, while in fact he was entitled to the St. Helena medal, having served in the armies of the Empire. Here was a dilemma! His military pride prompted him to parade his medal, and yet he dare not for fear of losing his young bride. So he made a compromise. He claimed and obtained his medal, without the knowledge of the young lady, and pinning it to his coat, determined to seek the admiration of the million on the side of town where fashionables never go, and where he had no fear of encountering the young lady in question. That would be something. So he started to the Garden of Plants, and after being sufficiently admired by the nurses and children, perhaps also by the monkeys and bears, he directed his steps towards the Place de la Bastille, the great rendezvous of the canaille. Here his success must have been great, for he grew so elated that he ventured on to the Boulevards.

He had passed the Boulevard du Crime and arrived at the Boulevard du Bonne Nouvelle, the frontier of the fashionable promenade; he was absorved in the smiles and the admiration of the passers-by, when who should he meet bnt his betrothed! He was too late; Waterloo was fought in June, 1815, and as that was the last army of the Empire, and as they did not enrol boys of 7 years of age, the old gentleman, who was at least 65, had to sacrifice his marriage to his love of admiration. He now promenades proudly on the Boulevards des Italiens, with his medal conspicuously displayed.

The present dangerous illess of the King of Prussia had its origin, perhaps it would be more better to say had for proximate cause, (for the King is addicted to weaknesses of the brain,) a too-strong dose of tobacco smoke. This was administered to him by the Emperor of Russia and the Princes of the Royal family, in the cars going from Potsdam to Berlin. The Czar and the Princes, to pass the time, commenced to smoke some very strong Russian tobacco, and soon filled the car. The King was observed to fall asleep, and was allowed to remain in this condition till they arrived at Berlin. When they attempted to arouse him they found it impossible to bring him to a state of complete consciousness; his physician was sent for, he was carried to the palace, and remained still somnolent at the latest dates. He is thought to be afflicted with softening (ramollissement) of the brain.

A Belgian journal gives out mysterious hints lately about the health of the Emperor NAPOLEON, and speaks of a spinal disease. The Emperor NAPOLEON has had symptoms of spinal disease on various occasions, and may have had again recently; but they have certainly not been of an alarming character, since his Majesty was never more active than at the present time, and never looked in better health.

The same journal starts another report still more equivocal. It speaks of the young Prince JOACHIM MURAT as having been selected by France, Russia, Prussia and Sardinia as reigning Prince, or King, if you please, of the united Danubian Principalities. It is not probable that Austria, Turkey or England would consent to see a BUONAPARTE on the throne of the Danube. This young Prince is, as you know, a grandson of the King of Naples. His mother, the present Princess MURAT, is an American lady, and the young Prince was born and raised in New-Jersey. If his father and mother should succeed to the throne of Naples, which is possible but not probable, and the young Prince should succeed to the throne of the Stirbeys and the Sturdzas, which also is possible but not probable, republican America will then be represented on two of the thrones of Europe—a result, however, for which she will be in no way responsible

The Prince DE JOINVILLE is on a visit at Constantinople with the Princess, and the French journal of that city makes the singular announcement that as soon as the French Minister, Mr. THOUVENEL, know of the presence of the Prince in the city, he sent word to the Turkish Government that any attentions paid by the Government to the Prince during his stay in the city, would be considered as if paid to the French nation. If this be true, we are permitted to suppose that LOUIS NAPOLEON'S hatred to the Orleans family is at last giving away.

The Government, determined to be prepared for all eventualities, and to fix its glories while it has the power, is about to establish two new galleries of paintings in the National Museum at the Palace of Versailles. The first will be called the Alma Saloon, and will contain the Landing, the battles of Alma, Inkermann, and the Cemetery. The second will be called the Malakoff Saloon, and will contain the various attacks toward and on that Fort. The English battles, Balaklava, the Redan, and the left wing of the combat at Alma, will be left out.

The health of Mademoiselle RACHEL is so much improved that she has been able to sit up and play a few games at cards with some of her intimate friends. No one, however, has any hope of a permanent amelioration. Her two children, ALEXANDER and GABRIEL, the first a legitimized son of Count WALEWSKI, French Minister of Foreign Affairs, the other of less noble origin, are with their mother. Count WALEWSKI is educating the elder son for diplomacy, and as he is well provided for, Madamoiselle RACHEL has made her testament entirely in favor of the second son, GABRIEL.

The Government, struck by the extraordinary success of M. GOLDSMIDT, an amateur astronomer, in finding comets, has just named that gentleman Chevalier in the Legion of Honor. M. GOLDSMIDT'S last two comets have been named by him Les Jumelles—The Twins. The one preceding was named by M. BABINET Pales, and the one preceding that, which was found by M. GOLDSMIDT, about six months ago, was called, with the Empress' permission, Eugenia.

MALAKOFF.

Brigham Young's Position.

The Washington States has the following:

"It is reported that BRIGHAM YOUNG and his people have determined to resist the entrance of the United States troops into the Mormon Territory, and threaten to burn the grass on the prairies, and, if necessary, to destroy their own city in order to deprive the troops of shelter during the Winter. The report accords with threats from YOUNG which were thrown out in Mormon newspapers. He even affected to doubt whether the Government would send out troops at such a season, as they might be easily deprived by the Mormons of all supplies. Not one of them, said BRIGHAM, will ever reach us without our consent. But, at the same time, he qualifies his threats by declaring his willingness to receive the United States authorities and obey United States laws, reserving to the people of the Territory all the rights which he desired for them. What the demands of the United States Government are which he now proposes to resist, it does not appear. He has had his own way so long, that he will probably consider the exercise of any United States authority as an encroachment upon the rights of the Mormons. That some trouble is to be made by the Mormons, is very probable, and, in that case, the military force employed by the United States on this service will be found inadequate. Should the Mormons resist the United States laws and authority, constitutionally exercised, they will be expelled, ere long, from the Territory; for the presence of a hostile community in the central part of the continent, and on the great line of communication across it, cannot be endured. Congress will, in this event, not fail to legislate upon the subject, and may, according to Judge DOUGLAS' suggestion, repeal the act establishing a Territorial Government, and partition the Territory between the adjacent States and Territories.

MY SISTER.

Up many flights of crazy stairs,
Where oft one's head knocks unawares;
With a rickety table, and without chairs,
And only a stool to kneel to prayers,
Dwells my sister.

There is no carpet upon the floor,
The wind whistles in through the cracks of the door;
One might reckon her miseries by the score,
But who feels interest in one so poor?
Yet she is my sister.

She was blooming, and fresh, and young, and fair,
With bright blue eyes, and auburn hair;
But the rose is eaten with canker care,
And her visage is mark'd with a grim despair.
Such is my sister!

When at early morning, to rest her head,
She throws herself on her weary bed,
Longing to sleep the sleep of the dead,
Yet fearing, from all she has heard and read;
Pity my sister.

But the bright sun shines on her and on me,
And on mine and hers, and on thine and thee,
Whatever our lot in life may be,
Whether of high or low degree,
Still, she's our sister,
Weep for our sister,
Pray for our sister,
Succour our sister.

The India Mutiny—Second Letter from Rev Dr. Duff.

From the Presbyterian.

CALCUTTA, August 8, 1857.

MY DEAR FRIEND: Long ere this note come to hand you will have heard of the terrible state o things in India. I would have written to you sooner concerning it, were it not that I was anxious to ascertain the fate of some of our dear missionary brothren in the Northwest, whose lives we knew were in mminent peril. We have reason to thank God that between this and Allahabad, though many have fallen victims to the violence of infuriated men, no missionary has as yet lost his life. But beyond Allahabad clouds and thick darkness have long been hovering—enough to fill our minds with saddest apprehensions.

Of the remarkable escape of GOPEE NATH NUNDY from Futtehpore, as well as of the safety of the brethren at Allahabad, you will have learnt before this can reach you. Mr. HAY, of the latter place, is now on his way home, and will tell you the incidents of his own experience. GOPEE NATH NUNDY is writing at considerable length to the Board at New-York.

At Agra, Saharanpore, Ambala, &c., we have no reason to apprehend that any life has been lost. For some time we were in sad suspense about Mr. BUTLER and his family, at Bareilly. But I feel truly thankful that a letter has at last been received from Mr. BUTLER himself, from the hill-station of Nynu Tal, assuring us of the safety of himself and family. Mr. BUTLER, when amongst us, proved himself to be no ordinary man; while, by his frank, open, hearty, generous spirit, he greatly endeared himself to all who had the privilege of making his acquaintance. All felt that the American Episcopal Methodist Church had been singularly favored in the choice of their first missionary to India.

And this brings me to Futtehgurh—the scene of greatest disaster, in a missionary point of view, in the ravaged and desolated northwest. Rumor after rumor has been reaching us from that quarter—each more distressing than another. Even now, we have no absolutely trustworthy information as to details. But we have too much reason to fear that all at Futtehgurh have been destroyed.

And, now, as to the causes of this terrible rebellion. Doubtless the primary ones are to be found in our own sins as a people and nation.

As to the proximate or immediate human instrumentality, I have no hesitation in saying, with the utmost emphasis, that the whole is the result of a long concocted Mohammedan conspiracy against the British power, with a view to the restablishment of a Mohammedan dynasty instead.

You will remember that in Mohammedanism there is an inseparable combination of the civil and spiritual power; and that its essential spirit is a fanatical spirit of conquest and dominion.

You will also remember that it was from Mohammedan rulers chiefly, and not from Hindoo rulers, that the British wrested the sceptre of Indian dominion. The Mohammedans often persecuted the Hindoos with the most terrible severities. Hence it is that the Hindoos generally were wont to look with favor on the British as their deliverers from the cruel Mohammedan yoke; and were well content passively to submit to the British sovereignty, and in many cases with cheerful acquiescence.

The case of the Mohammedans was totally different. Looking on the British as the subverters of their thrones, and the supplanters of their dynasties, they never could forgive them, and never could be peacefully reconciled to their supremacy.

For the last hundred years they have been sighing, and longing, and praying, not only in private, but in their public mosques, for the prosperity of the House of Timour, in the person of its representative, the titular King or Emperor of Delhi. But the prosperity of that house is only another name for the downfall of the British, and the reascending of the Mohammedan power.

So long, however, as the native army was faithful, there was no chance of success; and so their designs were kept in abeyance under the cloak or mask of professed loyalty to the British throne. At last a circumstance occurred, of which the conspirators took base advantage. The majority of the Sepoys of the Bengal army are Hindus of high caste—Brahmins and Rajputs. The latter the military class of India, next in social rank to the Brahmins—both extremely ignorant and excessively superstitious. Well, about the beginning of the present year, the Government wanted to introduce the improved Enfield rifle, the cartridge of which, as made in England, is greased with any fat—including, of course, cow's fat and hog's lard—the abominations of the Hindus and Mohammedans. Orders were issued to manufacture these in this country, but when the obnoxious ingredients that entered into their composition came to be known, peremptory instructions were given not to issue any of them to the native army; and so, in point of fact, none were actually issued.

But the emissaries of the Mohammedan conspirators, in various guises, went abroad among the Sepoys—gave exaggerated accounts of the new cartridge—and insinuated that its introduction was a cunning plot on the part of the British Government, designed to break their caste and coerce them into a profession of Christianity.

The evil-minded suggestion gradually spread and took root in the minds of the deluded Sepoys. Their superstitious prejudices were wounded in the sorest point. At last their minds became inflamed, and, like so many combustible materials, burst forth into open mutiny and rebellion—massacreing all the British and other foreigners, with native Christians on whom they could lay violent hands, and covering the whole land with incendiarism, plunder, devastation and blood. The titular king of Delhi has been proclaimed Emperor of India; the infatuated mutineers profess to receive and follow his decrees; while, in some distant places, petty chieftans, alike Hindu and Mohammedan, are beginning to proclaim themselves kings of their own respective districts and Provinces. The whole country to the northwest of Bengal is in a state of universal confusion and anarchy.

Such do I believe to be the true account of the rise and object of this disastrous rebellion.

The whole has burst upon us so unexpectedly, that all, taken completely by surprise, have been quite unprepared. Hence the temporary sad success of the misguided rebels. That they will be put down with a strong arm, I have no doubt whatsoever; but not before much more mischief shall accrue from their frenzied violence. No season of the year would have been more inopportune for military operations on the part of the British. Breaking out in the very highest of the hot season, when the raging hot winds compel all foreigners to immure themselves in their houses, in order to exist or vegetate, an outbreak so sudden and unexpected could not but have a temporary triumph. And the hot season, followed so immediately by the rainy season, with its train of fever, and cholera, and dysentery, would not but aggravate the disaster. When the cold season arrives, things will assume a very different aspect. But melancholy it is to reflect on the portentous magnitude of the calamities which may ere then ensue.

What need then of fervent applications at a throne of grace; if, happily, the Lord be pleased to interpose, with his own outstretched arm, for our deliverance. For as the Lord God omnipotent reigneth, it cannot be doubted that, in some one way or other, He will arise and plead the cause that is His own; and eventually crown it with glorious victory.

My warmest regards to Mrs. STUART and family, and all the kind circle of friends who live in my memory and heart. Yours ever affectionately,

ALEXANDER DUFF.

The following list of Americans in Paris was registered during the past week of October:

A nice point of law is in argument in the Courts of Beaver County, Pa. Mr. Sterling, a wealthy banker, lived unhappily with his wife, and they finally agreed to disagree and live separately. They have lived in the same town, he paying her expenses in a separate establishment. During the temporary absence of the ex-husband, however, the brother of the woman made affidavit that he had deserted her, and that she was likely to become a charge upon the county, whereupon the authorities proceeded to take possession of Mr. Sterling's banking office and effects. He returned while the process was going on, and some broken limbs were the consequence of the little fight that ensued. Legal proceedings are now had to test Mr. Sterling's right to protect his property.

A blooming couple came on board one of the Mississippi steamboats last week, at Omaha, claiming to be brother and sister. The sister was so timorous that it was necessary she should be in the stateroom with her brother. Suspicion was excited, the couple turned out to be runaways, a Justice of the Peace was found on board, and the twain were made one, at the personal solicitation of the Captain of the boat, who wanted no disreputable proceedings on his craft, and then the couple went back to their stateroom happy. The bridegroom said he would have married the girl before coming on board, only there was not time, and he was afraid of missing the boat.

Rev. Francis A. Mood, a preacher of the M. E. Church, South, was not long since refused admittance to the English Wesleyan Conference. He has published, in the Nashville Christian Advocate, a statement of the circumstances. He declares that "the Wesleyan body, closely beset by fanaticism without, found this occurrence too precious a morsel, and flung it forth to the English public as proof of their orthodoxy on the question of Slavery."

Gov. Bashford, of Wisconsin, publishes a correspondence between himself and Mr. Kilbourn of New-York, President of the La Crosse and Milwaukee Railroad Company, in order to remove the imputation that Gov. B. received a bonus from that Company.

Anthony Burns, the fugitive, whose recapture in Boston produced such an excitement a few years since, is now a student in the Fairmount Theological Seminary, near Cincinnati. He has been studying a year or so past at Oberlin.

A marriage took place in Fairfax County, Va., Saturday week of a couple who were divorced nine years ago. In the meantime the man had been married, and his wife died, and on Saturday he was again married to his former wife.

A small number of Methodists in De Soto (La.) parish met a few days since and subscribed $35,000 towards the foundation of a Male College for the use of their denomination. The same parish has already a Female College.

Chas. McNeil has sued the Madison (Wis.) Argus for libel, on account of its publication of the news of his arrest on a charge of conspiring to destroy a train of cars on the Milwaukee and Mississippi Railroad.

A young English printer, Henry Floyd, engaged on a Savannah paper, has gone to England to receive a fortune of $300,000, which has fallen to him by inheritance.

One of the victims of the Chicago fire had a life insurance of $3,000 in the Massachusetts Mutual, which expired only two days before he was killed.

Prof. Wm. B. Rogers, the geologist, is in Norwich, Eng., recovering from the accident which recently befell him.

Mrs. Eliza Claytor, of Lynchburg, Va., has given $1,000 to aid in the completion of the college buildings in that city,

The Boston papers publish a letter from Mr. Banks approving of the Hoosac Tunnel enterprise.

Hon. Theodore Frelinghuysen was married a few days ago to a young lady in Owego.

Miss Hosmer, the sculptor, has sailed again for France, after a brief visit in Boston.

Miscellaneous Items.

Major Neighbor, Indian Superintendent in Texas, writes to the Indian Bureau, that he has entered into an agreement with the several tribes of Indians on the reservations in Texas, by which all prisoners in their possession should be at once given up, and that he has agreed to give $50, in presents, for each prisoner, until the 20th day of October, after which time all captives are to be taken from the tribes, who may hold them, without any regard whatever; and all the Indians on the reserves in Texas are prohibited from capturing or holding any prisoners in future.

By a recent decision of the Courts of Morris County, N. J., Railroad companies are not relieved of responsibility for freight on its delivery at the depot. A suit was brought against the Morris and Essex Railroad for non-delivery of $300 worth of rags, bought in New-York and conveyed to Morristown. The Company proved delivery at their depot. Verdict for plaintiff.

We have information from Fort Kearney, up to the 24th of last month, on which day Col. Johnson arrived at that post, in seven days from Fort Leavenworth. The 5th Infantry and eight companies of the 10th Infantry, together with the two batteries of artillery reached Fort Laramie by the 7th Sept.; and this force is probably at Salt Lake City by this time.

Another case of punishment by Lynch-law occurred at Waxahatchie, Texas, a few days ago. The victim was a free negro preacher named Donegan, who received five hundred lashes. He was accused of robbery. After the whipping was over, he was warned to leave the county within twenty-four hours, and the State in four weeks.

The Waco (Texas) Southerner mentions an attempt, on the part of some Mexicans and white men, to get up an insurrection in Limestone and Ellis Counties, during a camp-meeting at Waxahatchie, and run the negroes to Mexico. The thing was discovered, and the instigators directed to leave.

The Montreal Pays speaks of a "religious" riot at St. Jean Chrysostom, between two parties of Irishmen, at the annual fair at that place, last week. Sticks, stones and pitchforks are said to have been used, and many serious injuries received, but the particulars had not reached Montreal.

The last appraisement of the famous McDonough estate, in New-Orleans, shows a total valuation of $1,930,098. The expenses last year were nearly $40,000. The Mayor of New-Orleans, in his late message, declares the whole case will be settled by January next.

The number of Odd-Fellows, in good standing, in Illinois, is over 11,000, with 233 lodges. The relief afforded last year, $12,000. A capitation tax has been established. W. Duff Greene of Mount Vernon, is the new M. W. G. Master.

There is a great wife establishment in Indian Orchard, Mass. From the weaving room of the Ward Mills, in which an average of eighty persons are employed, one hundred and thirty-seven girls have been married within two years.

The Kentucky Court of Appeals has decided, in the case of the Covington and Lexington Road, that the rolling-stock of a railroad cannot be levied upon and sold under execution. The plaintiffs were mortgagees.

The Charity Hospital in New-Orleans expends $75,000 annually, and treats an average of 15,000 patients yearly. It is supported by an immigrant tax and by licenses paid by theatres, &c. The city contributes nothing.

About $50,000 has been subscribed among the Methodists in Boston to aid in rebuilding the Wilbraham Seminary, which was burned a week or two since. The sum needed is $80,000.

The Southern Bishops of the Episcopal Church will meet at Montgomery, Ala., on the 25th November, to perfect the plan of a Southern Church University.

The Washington Star contradicts the report that Gov. Ligon, of Maryland, applied to the President for military aid to preserve the peace in Baltimore during the coming election.

A Northwestern Convention of Sunday School teachers is called to meet at Chicago on the 11th of November. Teachers throughout the West are invited to participate.

A new telegraphic line has been established north and south of Memphis. It connects at Grenada and Cairo.

New-Orleans papers of the 17th announce the arrival of $300,000 in specie, half of which was from New-York.

John B. Randall was killed in the woods near Parma, N. Y., last week, by the falling of a tree he was felling.

A new Odd-Fellows' Hall, in Covington, Ky., erected at a cost of $55,000, was dedicated last week.

ORIGIN OF THE CHICAGO FIRE.—The testimony produced at the Coroner's Inquest on the bodies of the victims of the Chicago fire, develops some startling facts. It appears that the upper floors of the stores burned on Water-street were occupied by young men as sleeping-apartments. A number of those young men were clerks in the stores. The evidence proves that it was their common practice to introduce women of bad repute into their rooms at night, and several of these women testify that they were passing the night in the rooms when the fire broke out. It is supposed that the condagration was the work of incendiaries, though it does not clearly appear, as yet, where or how the fire was set. Flames were first observed by the city bell-ringer, bursting out of the top story of the building.

UNITED STATES DISTRICT COURT.

Before Judge Betts.

OPENING LETTERS—REVOLT AND MUTINY—THE SLAVER MERCHANT.

John McGentry, convicted of opening letters which did not belong to him, was sentenced to three months' imprisonment, and a fine of $1.

Francis Brown and John Reeves, convicted of revolt and mutiny, were sentenced to 60 days' imprisonment at hard labor, and a fine of $15 each.

Jos. Santos, one of the parties charged with fitting out the schooner Merchant as a slaver, surrendered himself voluntarily this morning, and gave bail in $1,500 to answer to the charge. He stated that he had absented himself in order to obtain a separate trial. The other defendants are now beyond the reach of the Court, and Santos will be tried alone. He says the evidence against him is very different from that against the parties implicated with him.

UNITED STATES COMMISSIONER'S COURT.

ALLEGED CRUEL AND UNUSUAL TREATMENT.

United States vs. Captain John Maxwell, of the schooner Ida Della Torra.—This case came on before Commissioner BIDDLE, yesterday, upon the complaint of Herbert A. Persick, a colored boy, about 15 years of age, the cook of the schooner, who had sworn to cruel treatment by the Captain, who was arrested by Deputy Marshal O'Keefe.

In his affidavit, the colored boy alleges that the Captain throttled him, choked him, poured hot rice over his face, severely scalding him; that he thrust his head into a pan of (burning) coffee, and inflicted other injuries, such as kicking, beating, bruising and striking him with a rope. These alleged abuses were in Maracaibo, while the schooner was there waiting cargo. The boy, on arrival here, was assisted by the mate to make his complaint; the mate having also had a falling out with the Captain. The mate was present as a witness for the boy, but under the influence of the Captain, he showed great anxiety in Court to withdraw the complaint, or to screen the Captain, charging that he had been put up to it by the mate.

Herbert A. Persick (cook) being sworn, said: I am a native of Kingston, Jamaica; I shipped in New-York to go to Maracaibo and the West Indies as cook of the schooner Ida Della Torra; while in Maracaibo the Captain complained that I wasted the rice by cooking too much, and took a sauce-pan of hot rice from the stove and turned it over my face; the under part of my ear was blistered by it; I then went to clearing off the table, and the Captain, smelling some coffee in the galley, went and took the pan of coffee from the stove, charged me with burning it, and put my head in it; he did not hold me in long; I put my hand on the dish, trying to support myself, and my hand burnt; he held me up with my head over the pan was on top of a barrel near the galley. The Captain then bore me down on the deck; I don't know how long, my head was so hot; I then went to clear off the table; after I cleared the table I went to pick beans, and he saw me, and said that I was the very one to pick them; I was kind of crying at it, and my nose was bleeding, in consequence of the treatment I had received. I went to draw some water, but was not able to draw it; the Captain took the water and poured it over me, out of the bucket; he poured it over my face; I then went forward to the galley; I was not able to work for the skin was hot all over; the Captain cooked the dinner; other things were done, which I intend to forget, and did not want to have anything said about it; the Captain has not said anything to me in reference to this complaint; have had no conversation with him; the of causes. Motions and appeals from orders being first heard.

SPECIAL TERM.
Before Judge Rinkers.

The Comptroller of the City of Brooklyn vs. The Mechanics' Bank of Williamsburg.—This was an application for an injunction, and the appointment of a Receiver, the Bank having refused to pay over some $6,000, deposited by the late City of Williamsburg. The application was denied. This money is the proceeds of the sale of swamp lands made for the benefit of the poor some years ago, and the Bank authorities do not know who is entitled to receive the money.

NEWS OF THE DAY.

The success of the Free-State men in Kansas would now seem to be fully assured, both in the election of Mr. PARROTT as Delegate to Congress, and in the return of a majority of both branches of the Legislature. A protest, which we publish elsewhere this morning, signed by several prominent citizens of Kansas, against the fraudulent returns from the Oxford Precinct of Johnson County, was filed on the 15th inst., and in response to it, after a personal examination, Governor WALKER and Secretary STANTON issued a Proclamation on the 20th, in which they declare their intention to throw out the entire vote of Oxford, and to give certificates of election to the Free-State candidates. The Proclamation is said to have created a great deal of excitement among the extreme Pro-Slavery men, which vented itself in threats against the Governor and Secretary.

Our special Washington correspondent telegraphs that the Administration show evidences of recovery from the effect of the money panic, and that probably the necessity of curtailing the expenditures on the public works to any great extent will not arise. Secretary Cobb entertains the opinion that in the course of two or three months the revenue will increase sufficiently to provide for all current expenses.

The GENERAL PRODUCE MARKET opened tamely yesterday. The boisterous weather checked out-door movements. Flour, Wheat and Corn were sold pretty freely at reduced prices. The Hudson River boats brought down, during the previous 48 hours, 27,398 bbls. Flour; 98,000 bushels Wheat, 28,800 bushels Corn, and 11,000 bushels Barley. Pork was inactive, but held with more confidence. Lard was in fair demand, and Beef appeared in better request, each, however, at decidedly lower rates. Groceries ruled quiet at old figures. Cotton was unaltered. Freights were doing better.

HEBER C. KIMBALL, one of the most prominent of the Mormon Elders, has lately delivered a discourse at Salt Lake City, in which he takes strong ground against the Government of the United States, and expresses the determination of the Mormons to resist the troops to the last extremity. BRIGHAM YOUNG also made a speech in the same vein. In view of the anticipated difficulty with the Mormons, an unfortunate occurrence lately took place on the Great Plains. A drover, without any provocation, killed a woman and child belonging to a tribe of Indians which has hitherto refused to join the Mormons against the Government, and also fired at the Chief. It is feared that this may have the effect of creating a hostile feeling, which will end in alliance of the tribe with BRIGHAM YOUNG.

Yesterday, at 1½ P. M., the Commissioners of Police held a secret session, at which, it is said, no business of importance was transacted. They adjourned till to-day, (Tuesday,) at the same hour. It is understood that no letter was received from Mr. DRAPER relative to his election, or indicative of his decision on the matter of acceptance or non-acceptance, though it was very confidently asserted among the crowds of expectants that lined the sidewalk that Mr. DRAPER had signified his intention of accepting, but was detained for the present from entering on his duties as a member of the Board by the sickness of one of his family.

The Board of Aldermen granted to the Trustees of the Eastern Dispensary one-half of the block of land on which their building now is for twenty-one years, at the nominal rent of one dollar a year. A desponding communication was received from STEPHEN H. BRANCH, and referred to the Finance Committee. The majority and minority reports on the removal of steamboat landings further up-town were called up and read, and, after some debate, the whole subject was laid over, and the Board adjourned till Thursday next.

In the Board of Councilmen last evening, the report on the office of the Comptroller was, after short debate, made special for Thursday. A resolution was adopted calling on the Central Park Commissioners to say why they have not paid the salaries of the surveyors. A singular memorial was presented, calling upon the authorities to provide employment for the thousands of persons now out of work, and likely to remain so during the Winter, and suggesting their immediate employment upon public works. An ordinance for authorising the issue of bonds to the amount of $250,000 to pay for improvements in Central Park was laid upon the table, with the understanding that it was soon to be taken up. Mr. HARVEY HART, formerly Receiver of Taxes, forwarded a lengthy but obscure communication in explanation of his connection with the duties of the department. The Harlem Gas Bill was adopted, and the Board adjourned to Thursday.

The Board of Supervisors yesterday adopted the report of the committee fixing the salaries of the clerks of the Marine Court as follows: The clerk, $2,500 per annum; first assistant, $1,500; second assistant, 1,200, &c. The bills for refiting the Supreme Court rooms, amounting to $4,488 13, came up. Supervisor TUCKER opposed it on the ground that it was full 50 per cent. too high. A portion was referred back, and finally the whole were sent back to the committee. They also decided to appoint a docket clerk, for the County Clerk's office, at a salary of $800 a year. The Board then adjourned to Monday next.

A tea-meeting was held last evening in Rev. H. H. GARNET'S Church, Prince-street, near Broadway, the object of which was to collect sufficient money to purchase the liberty of a colored Methodist Episcopal preacher who is in bondage at Newbern, N. C. Tea was served at 7 o'clock, but, on account of the unpleasant weather which prevented many from attending who would otherwise have been there, the speeches which were to have followed were not made. Another tea-meeting will take place at the same place for the same object next Monday evening at 7 P. M., the weather permitting, when addresses will be made by Rev. Drs. KENNEDY, DOWLING, GARNET and ROY, Rev. Mr. ROBINSON and Rev. Mr. HATFIELD.

The Captain of the schooner Ida Della Torra was yesterday examined before United States Commissioner BRIDGHAM on complaint of a colored boy, the cook of the vessel, for cruel and unusual treatment while in Maracaibo. The case was adjourned to Thursday at 1 o'clock.

The gale which prevailed yesterday was very severe on the Lakes. The Canadian schooner Christina was driven on shore and totally wrecked, near Oswego, and the brig General Worth, from Superior, went ashore at Cleveland and was badly damaged.

The trial of FREDERICK CUEVA, for the murder of OSCAR DE GRANVAL, was commenced yesterday, in the Hudson County Court, New-Jersey. Distinguished Counsel are retained on each side.

1848 and 1857.

It is now very nearly ten years since the whole of Europe was shaken by a revolutionary earthquake. The laboring classes of the Continent, excited to frenzy by the declamations of philanthropists who loved their race not wisely but too well, and who sympathized with the sorrows without comprehending the nature of mankind, availed themselves of the overthrow of all political forms to attempt a reduction of the social order also, to a primitive chaos in which rights should be the condition of duties. We in America, after hailing with a somewhat inconsiderate enthusiasm the first appearances of republican victory in the old world, shrank back with no slight disgust from the subsequent revelations of the movement. Prosperous ourselves, and surrounded on every side by the evidences of individual activity and of individual success, the cry of the proletaire struck upon our ears with a ghastly and unnatural horror. We refused even the attempt to ascertain how far the excesses of socialistic theory in Europe were truly diseases of the public mind—crises of suffering, and not deliberate depravations of the will and of the character. We believed then, of course, that we should never be exposed to the ordeal through which Paris passed in blood in the days of June, and which London repelled only by a steady front of resolution on the 10th of April. Our "political institutions" were to save us forever from the pressure of the popular passions, and a revolt of the stomach was never to be apprehended on this side of the Atlantic. The voices of the passing hour somewhat sternly recall to us the history of ten years ago, and while they should teach us a clearer and more charitable judgment of the European Revolutionists, they warn us while it is yet time to beware lest a like thing overtake ourselves in the midst of our boasted ballot-boxes and of our liberal Legislatures.

How the Mayor of this City has treated the question of the relief of the laboring classes we already know. While urging upon the Municipal Government measures ingeniously contrived to exasperate the poor by further disappointments, and to increase the difficulties of the civic administration by adding another to the countless "jobs" on which our taxes and the character of our City are continually thrown away, Mr. WOOD raises the banner of the most fiery communism, and justifies by anticipation any possible excesses of the despairing poor, upon the persons and the property of the rich. This was bad enough, and all reflecting men must have seen in the words of the "Message" of Friday morning last, a darker omen for all classes of the community than had frowned upon us from the crash of banks and the closing of factories. What, then, are we to say of the meeting of "German Workingmen" in Philadelphia, of which we this morning publish the report, as it comes to us from that city of "brotherly love?" At that meeting the sentiments of Mayor WOOD were indorsed, and by men whose indorsement means not approval only, but action.

The communism of Mayor WOOD may be, and doubtless is, a mere personal "fetch,"—a "trap to catch the sunbeams" of popularity. But the communism of the Germans in Philadelphia is the cry of starving and desperate men—it is the communism, in a word, of the barricades of Paris, and of the "Assemblies" of 1848. How is this fatal madness to be dealt with when it thus takes shape from the very "form and pressure of the times?"

Doubtless there are hundreds and thousands of intelligent workingmen in New-York, in Philadelphia, in Baltimore, in all the centres of distress, who cannot be stung into the suicidal folly of riot and disorder even by the double spur of the actual anguish of want and of the deceitful hope of relief. But when we remember how large a proportion of our foreign population have come to us inoculated with the insanities of 1848, and how many of our native citizens have been more or less demoralized by the examples and the appeals of just such men as the one to whom the supreme charge of our municipal interests is now confided, would it not be the height of fatuous and stupid indifference for us to suppose that the calamities of the coming Winter can be borne in this country without the frighful aggravations of popular violence and of organized crime, unless the enlightened portions of the community, whether of the mercantile, the mechanic or the professional classes, set themselves at once about their public duties. If our City Governments shall at once take steps to afford all wise and practicable relief in the emergencies of the moment—and to organize the protective forces of the people into proportions and an order which shall make the ignorantly suffering patient, by making the designing and the demagogic hopeless. We may rely upon it that the recollections of the "year of revolutions" will be revived in our minds with all the tremendous reality of experience. Twenty years ago, when the numbers of the suffering poor were much more restricted, and when the habits of the purely American mind held a stronger sway over the working classes of this City, the intolerable pangs of starvation found vent in a storm of senseless violence.

The "flour-riots of 1837" have not been forgotten by old Knickerbockers, and there are thousands of men who can remember the miserable spectacle of armed Americans marching upon their fellow-citizens to repress disorder which hunger alone had provoked. If such scenes inflamed into ten-fold violence shall disgrace our Municipal history again, the responsibility will rest upon the heads of our citizens themselves, who, being warned in time, are by that warning fully armed.

A CENTRAL RELIEVING HOUSE.—A very sensible movement has been made in Boston, with a view to the relief of the poor during the coming season, which might be imitated here with great advantage to all classes of the community. The plan in question is the establishment of a central house, or office, where all persons who are compelled to seek aid from the public or private charities of the city, may apply for information or relief. Many poor wretches might escape from the degradation of beggary, and private families be saved the annoyances of constant appeals from the suffering, if they only knew where to apply for relief. There might, and ought to be, a central house for relief, to be kept open night and day, where the suffering poor could apply and make known their necessities, and be directed where to go for assistance according to their circumstances. Some such arrangement as this will be needed this Winter, as much for the relief of the suffering poor as for the suffering rich and well-to-do, who, after contributing their quota for the relief of the poor, ought not to be subjected to the annoyance of mendicants at their own doors.

Curtailment of Credits.

It follows as a matter of course, in all times of difficulty, that an immediate investigation should be made into the causes of the disorders from which the community suffers. Divers are the sources to which the present financial troubles have been traced, and among them long credits have been supposed by many to be the most prolific of disasters. The domestic commission-houses, which have been the greatest sufferers, as they were the first to feel the effects of the commercial revulsion, had taken the subject into consideration some months ago; we called attention to the movement at the time, but we believe no agreement was arrived at by the houses in question then. Some of the Boston houses, we learn, have recently determined to shorten their credits, and the dry-goods importers have also begun to agitate the matter; but in the present unsettled state of affairs it will be difficult to make any permanent change in the credit system. On Saturday night the hardware dealers of this City held a meeting at the Astor House to discuss the subject of curtailment of credits, and we have noticed that one of our daily cotemporaries has avowed itself in favor of a total abolition of the credit system, and a return to the barbarian practice of ready money and pay as you go. Ready money is certainly preferable to long credits, and cash on the nail has a very pleasant and seductive sound to a matter-of-fact business man. But ready-money transactions are simply impossible, except to a very small extent, in an enterprising commercial community. The credit system is an integral and essential element of modern civilization, which cannot be abolished nor dispensed with. It is the natural outgrowth of the peaceful relations which exist between commercial nations, and is very justly regarded as one of the surest pledges of peace. Two communities that are largely indebted to each other cannot afford to quarrel, and what is true of nations and States is also true of individuals. But the credit system is, of course, subject to abuses, and it cannot be denied that extensive and indiscriminate credits have been among the causes which produced our present financial troubles. To attempt to remedy the evil, however, by an undiscriminating curtailment of credits in all departments of trade would be productive of much greater harm than it would cure. As the system of credits has gradually grown out of the necessities of the trading world, any abuses which have crept into it, might be as gradually abated by the exigencies of the parties affected. No evils can be cured by conventions or resolutions. The system is full of anomalies and apparent inconsistencies, which are puzzling to a superficial observer; but they are, doubtless, perfectly coherent and strictly in conformity with the necessities of business. Thus, it is difficult to understand why certain articles should be always sold for cash, while others of a similar nature are sold on a credit of eight months. Cotton, for example, is always a cash article, while cotton goods are sold on credits of six and eight months. Wheat, corn, rice and whisky are cash articles, but sugar and coffee are uniformly sold at four months; tea is sold at six and eight months, while St. Domingo coffee is always quoted at cash prices. Imported liquors and wines are sold at six months' credit, and molasses at four months. Nearly every description of European manufactured goods sold here are sold at a credit of six and eight months; but the importer buys on a credit of four months from the day of shipment. These are the wholesale rules of credit; but the jobber sells on uniform time to his country customer. The grocer sells on a credit of four months; but all others, druggists, hardware dealers, crockery and dry goods merchants, sell at six months; and it has been often urged, as an argument in favor of short credits, that there are fewer failures among the grocers than in any other department of trade. This fact we believe to be true; but we doubt the cause assigned: for all jobbers do, in effect, sell upon the same credit Their country customers settle with them twice a year when they come to town to make their purchases, and the difference between the dry-goods jobber and the grocer is that one charges interest after four months, and one after six. The reason why grocers more rarely fail than dry-goods dealers, is that they only purchase to meet the actual wants of their customers, and that their goods do not depreciate in value by being kept on hand; while the value of dry goods depends in a great degree upon the caprices of Fashion, and are often rendered worthless by being kept over a season. There is no natural limit to the demand for dry goods, and dealers are continually stimulated to lay in larger stocks than the demands of their business require.

In this country the constant and natural tendency is to an expansion and not contraction of credits, and we do not imagine that any effort will be successful in checking this tendency, but for a brief season. Whatever we have become as a prosperous people, has been by virtue of the credit system, and, with the growth of the country and the expansion of our population, the system must expand. The farmers of the West and the planters of the South produce their crops on a credit basis. Slaves and cattle are cash commodities, but land may be had upon trust, and all the necessaries required by the planter and the farmer while their crops are maturing must be obtained on credit. The importer trusts the jobber, the jobber trusts the country storekeeper, and he trusts the farmer, and the farmer trusts to the soil. When the harvest is gathered, the farmer sells his grain for cash, and pays the storekeeper; the storekeeper pays the jobber, and the jobber pays the importer or commission merchant, who pays the foreign or home manufacturer. This is the natural course of credit, and, under the system which has grown out of our condition, we have waxed prosperous, and become a mighty people. If great capitalists cultivated the soil, there would be no necessity for a credit system; the farmer, while waiting for his crops to grow, could afford to pay cash on the nail for the necessary commodities used in his family; but capital seeks other fields than corn fields, and, in nine cases out of ten, the producers of our great staples anticipate their harvests by means of the credit system.

But, after all, the seemingly long credits are not so long as they appear to be. The Eastern manufacturer, for instance, sells his goods to the New-York jobber on a credit of six and eight months; he has paid cash for his raw material, and he charges a profit according to the time given, which includes insurance for the risk he runs; it seems a long time to wait for his pay; but, as Mr. NATHAN APPLETON stated in his letter to the President of the Bank of Commerce, a few weeks ago, the manufacturer puts his six months' notes into Bank where they are discounted, and he does, in fact, get cash for his merchandise.

The credit system works very smoothly and happily until it begins to run into excesses, and then it corrects its vices by a general smashing and crashing, such as we are in the midst of now. But, happily, these crises do not occur oftener than once in twenty years, and even then it will be found that the crisis is not brought on by the regular transactions of trade, but by extraneous causes for which legitimate commerce ought not to be held responsible.

Kansas Affairs.

There seems little reason to doubt that the Free-State Party have carried the Territorial Legislature in Kansas, as well as the Congressional Delegate. It is conceded on all sides that unless the fraudulent vote in Johnson County is allowed to give that District to the Democrats, they have no chance of controlling either branch of the Legislature,—nor is it quite certain that they could do so even with all the advantage of that fraud. The latest returns, contained in our Kansas exchanges, give the Free-State men 27 out of the 39 Representatives, and 9 out of the 13 Councilmen. We publish a protest, which has been sent to Governor WALKER and Secretary STANTON, against the return of over 1,600 votes in the Oxford District. The names of voters to this number are entered upon the voting list,—but it is stated that the signatures of the three Judges of Election are all in the same handwriting;—and it is notorious that there are not a hundred bona fide citizens resident in that town. By our telegraphic dispatch from St. Louis it will be seen that Governor WALKER and Secretary STANTON, in response to this protest, have issued a proclamation, in which they declare their intention to reject the entire vote of Oxford and give certificates to the Free-State candidates. Secretary STANTON'S course in connection with the exercise of the right of suffrage in the Territory, has been marked by fairness and candor; and he has acted consistently in defeating the glaring fraud which was attempted upon the rights of the people.

We copy also from the Herald of Freedom, a decided but not partisan advocate of Free-State principles, what appears to be an authoritative statement of the action of Gov. WALKER upon several points connected with the election, in regard to which his conduct has been severely censured. It has been alleged that the Governor advised a Mr. HERNDON to vote, knowing that he was from Missouri. The statement, in itself highly improbable, is directly and explicitly contradicted on the authority of Lieut. CARR, who heard the conversation, and who states that Gov. WALKER told Mr. HERNDON that he could not vote. We have no doubt that, of the two versions of the story, this is the true one.

What has seemed at this distance the most serious charge against the Governor is the allegation that he permitted and advised the soldiers to vote at Kickapoo,—in direct violation of the Nebraska bill, as well as the Territorial law. The Herald of Freedom gives what is probably a true statement of the case. It will be remembered that in his Proclamation concerning the election, Governor WALKER took the ground that the Territorial Election law of 1857 virtually repealed the Election law of 1855, which prohibited soldiers from voting, and restricted the suffrage to those who should have paid a tax. In this position he was sustained by the President and his Cabinet,—and it was in consequence of it that the Free-State men, who had refused to pay the tax, secured the right to vote. But the Governor was also asked whether the same decision did not of necessity imply that the prohibition of soldiers from voting, contained in the law of 1855, was also repealed by the subsequent law of 1857, which declared that "all citizens of the United States, who had resided six months within the Territory," should have the right to vote. And he felt compelled to say that it did, and that all soldiers, who had their families with them and had been for six months bona fide residents of the Territory, were entitled to vote. The importance of this decision, it is stated, has been greatly exaggerated, inasmuch as only forty or fifty soldiers voted under it, and the result was in no way affected by it. We are constrained to acknowledge that the explanation thus given relieves Gov. WALKER from the censure to which we supposed he had rendered himself obnoxious.

THE STREET COMMISSIONERSHIP.—The decision of Judge PEABODY, which was rendered on Friday last, in relation to the Street Commissionership, puts the office into the hands of the Governor's appointee, Mr. CONOVER, who is now in charge; but the Attorney-General having granted permission for a writ of quo warranto, to be brought in the name of the State, the question as to the rightful possessor of the office, whether CONOVER or DEVLIN, has yet to be decided, and it remains for the Comptroller to say, in the meanwhile, whether the present incumbent of the office shall perform its duties or not. So far as the public are concerned, it is not a matter of very great interest who the individual may be that is recognized as Street Commissioner, but it is of great importance to the community at the present time, that the business of the Department should be carried on by somebody. There is now a sufficient quantity of work to be done, which the Common Council has authorized the Street Commissioner to make contracts for, to give employment to at least 5,000 men; but no contracts can be entered upon by the Commissioner without the cooperation of the Comptroller, and he has not yet determined whether he will recognize Mr. CONOVER or not. There could never be a more favorable opportunity, for the interest of the City, than the present time, to complete the unfinished work of the Street Commissioner's Department. Labor is plenty and cheap, and contracts could be made at a much lower rate than at any time during the past ten years. The very men who might be employed by the Department, if not set to work, will probably have to be taken care of by the Alms House Department.

City and Country Banks.

We notice in the proceedings of the Convention of New-York Country Bankers at Syracuse a few days since, that an apprehension was expressed that the accumulation of Country circulation in and near the City would prove inconvenient, perhaps, disastrous to many of the Bankers on the resumption of specie payments. This fear ought to be, if it is not, wholly groundless. The City will not attempt a general resumption without the Country; nor until the latter is fully prepared for it. The banking interest of the State will never be disintegrated. We believe this to be the present feeling of a large majority of the City Bankers. The late embarrassment before the suspension, and the Metropolitan plan of using the Country circulation since, have wrought a change of views, as well as policy, on this subject. The change is entirely consistent with the intent and spirit of the general banking law. The currency of New-York is and ought to be a unit from Buffalo to Montauk Point. If there be among our City Bankers any discontented spirits who think otherwise, they have their remedy—they can wind up and quit. They have no chartered right to force the policy of a small minority upon the large majority, and no right at all, as the Legislature would probably teach them, if required, to contravene the genius of the system. Recent events go to prove that the Banks throughout the State must stand or fall together.

There is no injustice or inequality in this principle. The right to bank, under the law, is a free one, but the privilege of doing so, and the law itself, are important as well as liberal grants, from the State, which must be wisely and harmoniously appreciated, or they can at any time be withdrawn by the law-making power, without the violation of any vested right. It was different, under the old Constitution, which sanctioned close charters, but these have nearly all passed away, by original limitation. The gentlemen in Wall-street, who occasionally make wry faces at the country banks, and at the Free Law itself, are no longer of the favored few in the Safety Fund list.

But, let us look at the New-York system on the cardinal point of circulation. It assimilates to the English law of currency as near as may be. It recognizes, like Sir ROBERT PEEL'S bill, the mixed basis of specie and public stocks. It sanctions a certain, but very limited amount of circulation without either basis specifically. This is done to preserve inviolate the Safety Fund privileges, until these all expire by limitation Registration at the Department only is demanded from these peculiar banks, and this single check has been found sufficient, in most instances, to keep them in line with the free banks. The currency of New-York now consists of about twenty-eight millions dollars, of which twenty is fully secured by public securities in the Department by the Free Banks; three and a half of Safety-Fund issue guaranteed by these banks to be liquidated or retired in three years, and four and a half by the still existing Safety Fund Banks, and the Manhattan Company of this City. The whole is now made a uniform currency. It was nearly so, under the law, before suspension. The difference then was that the country circulation was required to be redeemed in the City on an abatement of one-quarter of one per cent., or at the counter, in full. There is no reason why this uniformity should be disturbed. There is every reason why the value and currency of a city and a country bank-note should be kept the same, and the banking interest from one end of the State to the other move in perfect unison. The circulation is not excessive; from the nature of the public debt of New-York, it cannot be made excessive or insecure. Two weeks ago it had reached an inconvenient minimum. The reaction, under the Metropolitan plan, will restore something like the sum needful and consistent with the trade and business of the country.

The English system, to which our own is assimilated, authorizes the country or provincial banks, exclusive of Scotland and Ireland, to circulate thirty-seven millions dollars (or £7,525,000) over and above the specie representative. This answers to our Safety-Fund circulation. It is scarcely so well guarded. The English Bank in London is authorized to issue seventy-two millions dollars (or £14,475,000) on the pledge of public securities, and as much more as the bullion held in the banking department. There is no difference known between the City and Provincial circulation. The issues of the Bank of England correspond in amount and vary with the bullion in the Bank and the £14,475,000 in securities. The Notes unemployed in the Banking Department are held as so much reserved ability in the establishment to extend its discounts. The whole issue being secured in the Issue Department, as our New-York currency is secured in the corresponding Department at Albany, the Notes Unemployed and Gold are held in equal regard as a test of banking ability. The Gold has no higher representative value than the Public Securities pledged, in common, for the Circulation. Of the authorized issue on the last English report of £24,553,000, the bank held, unemployed, £4,606,000, and this sum is, for the time, the measure of the strength of the bank to regulate its general movement.

We make this explanation by way of illustrating the position of the banks in this City toward the Country Currency which they hold in reserve in the Metropolitan Bank. They have accumulated by collections from the country, in ten days since the plan was adopted and the equality of the Country Circulation thus acknowledged, about three millions of dollars. This is equal, in every financial sense, to the same amount of Gold. The certificates based upon it are made to adjust balances between the Banks the same as a sum in specie [illegible] lions, the [illegible] denote, not [illegible] expansion, but [illegible] the ability to create in the discount market. The State circulation is fixed in extent by law. The Safety Fund circulation cannot be increased, and must be kept equal to gold or its equivalent current in New-York or Albany. The [illegible] circulation is secured by pledge of Public Stocks, [illegible] at all times to gold or funds current in New-York and Albany. The whole is equal to cash in the banking sense at all times in New-York City; as much so as the notes of the Bank of England and the Provincial Banks are at par in London. The accumulation of this circulation in the City Banks is their strength, without being in any sense the weakness of the country. That the banks here will use their reserve (and their own notes secured at Albany, also,) in discounting paper under suspension is just as certain as they would use the same amount of Gold, under specie payments. And until the country banks feel strong enough to redeem in specie, the City will manifest no undue eagerness to change the existing regulation, simply because the whole State must be in a condition to return to specie payments before it will be to the interest, the convenience or the true credit of the City to attempt it

SITE FOR A NEW-YORK POST-OFFICE.—We hope that some steps will be promptly taken towards the selection and purchase of a site, and the erection of a building, for a New-York Post-Office. The whole matter rests in the hands of the President, who is authorized by law to purchase a site at a price not exceeding $500,000. It is stated that Mr. BUCHANAN considers this sum entirely too large to be paid for the ground alone, and that he is unwilling to exceed half that amount in providing a site. It will not be easy to find a suitable plot of ground, properly situated and of adequate size, in private hands, which can be purchased for that price.

The City Government, however, has full authority, by virtue of a law passed at the last session of the Legislature, to "Make conveyance by deed of grant or lease, of any portion of the Park, to the Government of the United States, for the erection thereon, at the expense of the said Government, of such building for the purposes of a Post-Office, or accommodation for the Courts of the United States, held in said City, and for the officers attached to said Courts, upon being duly compensated for the same."—(Chap. 770, § 2 Laws of 1857)

It seems to be universally conceded that the new Post-Office should be situated in the Park,—and our City Authorities, it seems to us, would do well to enter upon negotiations with the President in regard to it. If the purchase could be made and the erection of the building could be at once commenced, it would contribute very largely towards furnishing employment to the laboring poor, without which there must inevitably be extreme suffering among them during the coming Winter.

THE TWO WOODS.—The Tribune paid an unintentional compliment to Mayor WOOD, yesterday, by comparing him with WILLIAM WOOD, who was the butt of Dean SWIFT'S Drapier's Letters. The Tribune says:

"We beg leave to remind our excellent Mayor of the hubbub which a namesake of his occasioned in Ireland a century and more ago, by a similar attempt to supply a scarcity of money by the introduction of a new coinage of his own. We question much whether FERNANDO WOOD'S potatoes would give as great satisfaction in the way of payment than did WILLIAM WOOD'S half-pence and farthings."

The only resemblance between the two Woods and their transactions happens to be in their names. WILLIAM WOOD was a very extensive manufacturer of copper and iron, who was commissioned by the British Government in the year 1722 to supply Ireland with £100,000 worth of halfpence and farthings. The coin was a perfectly legitimate one, strictly in conformity with the requisition of the Government, and much better than that which it was intended to displace. It would have proved most beneficial to the people, had not Dean SWIFT, who was then, to use his own words, living in Dublin "like a rat in his hole," in the very wantonness of his power, written a few letters under the signature of a Drapier, warning his countrymen that a certain WILLIAM WOOD was going to defraud them out of their eye-teeth by means of his copper half-pence. Such was the force of the Dean's style, the irresistible wit of his genius, which he put into his Drapier's letters, that he succeeded in persuading the Irish people, against the evidence of their own senses, that the new coin was a swindle. The consequence was that WOOD was nearly ruined by having all his coin sent back to him; but he was an honest man, and he received the contract from Government not as a job, but because he offered lower terms than any of his competitors. The Drapier's letters are the worst blot upon the fame of Dean SWIFT; and, if the Tribune had wanted to institute a parallel between Mayor WOOD'S late message and anybody concerned in the Dublin half-pence riots, the Dean of St. Patrick's, and not WILLIAM WOOD, was the proper person to distinguish in that manner.

MISSING.—Our advertising columns have already noticed the very singular disappearance of Mr. E. H. HOWELL, of this City, who has been missing since Monday, the 19th inst. He was about forty years of age, of medium height, and wore dark clothing, with a brown Raglan overcoat. His spirits had been very much affected by pecuniary difficulties, and it is feared he may have wandered off, or even committed suicide, in a moment of temporary derangement. Information in regard to him is solicited by THOMAS PALMER, No. 83 Duane-street.

In Justification of the Russian Admiral Nordman.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

Among the most intimate of my friends during my three years' traveling in Russia, was the Counsellor of State and celebrated naturalist, NORDMANN, of Odessa, by birth from Abo, in Finland, and his brother, at that time, (1840 to 1843,) Adjutant of Admiral MENSHIKOFF, now Admiral himself.

I am stating the purest truth in saying that I very rarely met with gentlemen in any country more kind-hearted and of more noble and lofty aspirations than these two brothers.

This was my conviction after some years of frequent amicable intercourse. If, therefore, Admiral NORDMAN does not appear, as you stated in YOUR Saturday's paper, to possess such a character in the disaster in the Baltic Sea, there must have been [illegible] causes which forced him into passivity, perhaps very severe regulations of the Russian Navy Department.

Very respectfully, Sir,
L. R. BREISACH.

We do not question that Admiral NORDMAN may be a most excellent gentleman, tender-hearted and well educated; but it is very evident, from his own letter giving an account of the loss of the La Forte, that he is very little of a sailor. The Russians, in fast, are always out of their element on the [illegible]

ACKNOWLEDGMENT.—We have received from G. W. M. five dollars for the Children's Aid Society, towards enabling them to carry out the plan for sending servant girls to the West, of which we have already spoken.

FROM WASHINGTON.

The Administration and the Money Crisis.

Kansas Affairs—The New Frigates—Site for a New-York Post-Office—Miscellaneous.

From Our Own Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, Saturday, Oct. 24, 1857.

Governor WALKER's requests to have the United States troops detained in Kansas during the coming Winter indicates his fear that their services may be required, and, therefore, that the troubles in the Territory are not altogether at an end. The companies on service in that quarter are seriously needed elsewhere for the protection of the frontier from savage violence, and the Cabinet will scarcely assent to the Governors' request, unless sustained by decided evidence of the necessity for so doing. An order, withdrawing the force from Kansas, had already been prepared before the Governor's letter was received. Mr. WALKER's friends here think he will arrive at Washington before the meeting of Congress.

There is little doubt that the efforts of Hon. J. B. HASKIN to secure employment at the Brooklyn Navy-Yard, this Winter, for the fifteen hundred mechanics there, will be entirely successful. The report of a Naval Board as to the propriety of altering the Brandywine into a propeller, is little else than a formality. Gentlemen familiar with the subject, say there is no doubt of the economy of the improvement, or of its practicability; and, as stated in a recent communication, there is an imminent necessity for the augmentation of our naval force by every judicious means. It is not probable that either of the new steam sloops-of-war will be constructed at New-York, with the exception of the one awarded by contract to Ex-Mayor WESTERVELT. Philadelphia will have one, as you are already apprised. Another will probably be built at Norfolk; and the other two are likely to be given to the Navy-Yards at Charlestown, Mass., and Kittery, Maine, although the matter is not yet decided.

We have rumors here of a world of private jobbing going on in connection with the purchase of a site for the New-York Post-Office. Postmaster-General BROWN received pressing attentions from a variety of patriotic gentlemen while in your City, some of whom very disinterestedly pointed out several "only" places suitable for the new site, and descanted eloquently upon their striking advantages. These, however, all considered half a million of dollars very little more money than ought to be paid for the site itself. If a million had been appropriated, it is not improbable that the margin remaining would have been just as small. But Mr. BUCHANAN will help Governor BROWN in disappointing all these disinterested speculators. He does not deem it absolutely essential to put the office, at any cost, just where the merchants want it; but is determined to find some location which can be obtained at a moderate price—say a couple of hundred thousand dollars. If the City authorities shall offer a site in the Park for this sum, it will be accepted; but if they do not, the chances are that all efforts to secure a location so favorable as that will be abandoned. There is reason to believe that the speculative designs of outside parties have delayed a suitable and advantageous proposition from the City up to the present time, and that when they become satisfied that there is to be no margin in the purchase price for private aggrandizement, the great difficulty of procuring an advantageous site will be removed. Mr. BUCHANAN will take the matter in his own hands, and is resolutely determined not to favor any considerable increase of the entire cost of site and building, over and above the appropriations already made.

I do not think the Administration is altogether united in opinion as to the policy to be pursued with reference to the public expenditures during the present monetary crisis. At first, "contraction" to the narrowest limits was the order of the day; but this policy, it is now seen, must add greatly to the public distress by throwing thousands of poor men out of employ, and, at the same time, reducing the amount of capital in circulation. Congress, during the last session, made appropriations, still unexpended, quite equal to the entire amount of surplus now in the Treasury; and it is a debated question whether it is not better to go on with the work thus ordered—all of it being in reality needed to be done as early as practicable—even though a loan to the Government should be necessary in order to raise the money for current expenses during the temporary falling off of public revenue. If a Government loan would draw from their hoarding places and put in active circulation a few millions of the specie now lying useless in the hands of timid holders, why would it not be advisable to authorize it? Surely that would be far better than adding to the general distress by stopping important public works and throwing workmen out of employ. A public loan is a great bug-bear always to partisans—but should not be seriously dreaded by practical men under the existing circumstances.

Although Mr. TOUCEY is understood to have declined the seat upon the Supreme Bench, made vacant by the resignation of Judge CURTIS, I am inclined to believe that he will be nominated therefor after a few weeks, and will accept the place, which is far more suited to his tastes and inclinations than are the drudging details of his present position. S.

BY TELEGRAPH.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Oct. 26.

The Administration is evidently recovering from the effects of the monetary panic, and will not materially curtail the expenditures on public works.

It is understood that the Cabinet is not disposed to contract a loan, but favors a resort to Treasury notes, if necessary.

Secretary COBB's opinion, from present evidences, is, that the revenue will increase sufficiently for the current expenses within two or three months.

In the Naval Courts, Lieutenant WHITING's defence has been read, Lieutenant NOLAND's case is commenced, and the cases of Lieutenant MORGAN and Captain RITCHIE are still pending. S.

[FROM THE REPORTER FOR THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

WASHINGTON, Monday, Oct. 26.

The Interior Department has received information that a drover lately, while crossing the great plains, unnecessarily killed a woman and a child of the Snake Indians, and also fired at the War Chief of the tribe. In consequence of this the Indians are greatly incensed. As they have heretofore been on remarkably good terms with the whites, and have steadily refused to take part with the Mormons, the fear is that they now depart from their friendly policy. The Department will at once take measures to repair, if possible, the mischief thus occasioned.

Nearly eight millions of acres were located with military land warrants under the Act of March 1855, from the 1st of July 1856 to the 31st of August last.

The mails from all points South, as late as due, are to hand.

Apprehended Deficit in the Government Revenue—Work at the Navy-Yards, &c.

Correspondence of the Baltimore Sun.

WASHINGTON, Sunday, Oct. 25.

The Government being justly apprehensive of the occurrence of a deficit in the revenue which is relied upon to meet the appropriations for the present fiscal year, has determined to commence at once a reduction of expenditures. Many of the appropriations are of a character that can be legally deferred. Orders have been given to discontinue works at the Navy-Yards and arsenals, and the work on the fortifications is to be deferred. The public had called for a more active precaution of these and other public works, as a means for affording employment to numbers of idle and starving laborers during the Fall and Winter.

The Treasury has also closed its doors to further redemption of United States bonds, which to many bankers and merchants, both on this and the other side of the Atlantic, is a grievous disappointment, inasmuch as various and important business operations have been based upon the supposition that certain United States stocks would be redeemed at fourteen per cent. premium after the 1st of November.

The Government, it is remarked, show by these measures that it is alarmed, and ceases to present a bold front to the country. But is there not good reason for alarm, and why should the Government exhibit unfounded confidence in early restoration of prosperous activity? The fact is generally admitted that exchanges, and currency, and business and credit are now more completely paralyzed all over the country than at any time since the 24th of August, when the revulsion commenced. The Government is obliged to heed these facts.

On the other hand, the Secretary of the Treasury has determined, as I learn, not to withdraw from the Mint the facilities afforded at his discretion for an advance of coin to the depositors of bullion. It was strongly represented to him that the withdrawal of these facilities, requiring about six or seven millions, would check the coinage and increase the embarrassments of the currency.

The reports in reply to the Treasury Circulars, asking information as to probable importations for the next year or two, are beginning to come in. They concur in representing that the imports of railroad iron, sugars, and all manner of luxuries and fancy goods will be seriously diminished, but that the demand for staple goods of ordinary consumption will continue at the present rate.

But, should the United States Government find its revenue unequal to ordinary and economical expenditures in time of peace—a thing which has happened, and may again happen—they would not, at such a time as this, resort to a loan, but to the issue of Treasury notes. The call for a loan would only serve to straighten the money market, and augment the existing pressure; whereas, the issue of Treasury notes would be an acceptable and useful addition to the currency of the country. But there is really no ground for the belief that the revenue will fall short of necessary expenditures for the present or the next fiscal year. Any deficit in the revenue for the next fiscal year must, of course, be met by a radical reduction of unnecessary expenditures.

OBITUARY.

Crawford, the Sculptor.

The steamer Baltic brought the painful intelligence, which has been anticipated the past two months, of the death of our distinguished countryman, THOMAS CRAWFORD, the Sculptor. He died in London on the morning of the 10th of October, in the 44th year of his age, and we learn that his body will be sent to New-York by the steamer Arago. Mr. CRAWFORD was born in this City, in the year 1813, of Irish parents, and early gave evidence of his artistic instincts. He was a schoolmate of PAGE, the portrait-painter, and they spent the time which ought to have been devoted to Latin and Mathematics in making drawings. Both of these eminent artists were put by their parents to mercantile pursuits, but they soon broke loose from the trammels imposed upon them, and gave themselves up to the course for which Nature had qualified them. CRAWFORD was put with FRAZEE and LAUNITZ to learn the art of modeling and carving in marble, and he made such progress that he was enabled to go to Rome to complete his studies before he was 21. In Rome he had the good fortune to be taken into the studio of THORWALDSEN, who ever after entertained the highest regard for his pupil, and predicted his future greatness. With the true spirit of his country, CRAWFORD was restless while a pupil, and he soon had a studio of his own, where he commenced many of the works which have gained him his reputation. He executed a great number of busts, and was successful in making portraits, but he had a distaste for this kind of work, and aspired to something higher than the modeling of portraits in plaster. The first classical subject which he executed was his famous statue of Orpheus, which remained a considerable time in his studio, in clay, before he received an order to execute it in marble. The order at last came from Boston, and the statue is now in the gallery of the Athenæum in that city. It was owing, we believe, to the exertions of Hon. CHARLES SUMNER, who had seen the model in Rome, that the Boston Athenæum was induced to give the order for its completion. Since then the sculptor has not lacked for commissions, and he has executed many important works of a monumental character, besides a great number of bas-reliefs and busts. The last of his busts, we believe, was one of his wife, which was exhibited here a few years since. Among his more recent works were statues of CHANNING, CLAY and BEETHOVEN. The latter cast in bronze, is in the Music Hall in Boston. But his great work was the heroic monument of WASHINGTON for Richmond, which was ordered by the State of Virginia. The equestrian figure of WASHINGTON, cast in bronze, in Munich, is now on its passage to this country.

Mr. CRAWFORD was in Rome twenty-three years, during which time he visited his native City but twice. He married a daughter of the late SAMUEL WARD of this City, whom he leaves a widow, with four children, who are at present living with their mother's sister, Mrs. MAILLARD, at Bordentown, N. J. His only relative is his sister Mrs. CAMPBELL, who was with him at the time of his death. It is nearly two years since the most painful apprehensions were felt for Mr. CRAWFORD, in consequence of the appearance of a malignant tumor under his left eye. He had the benefit of the best surgical skill in Europe, but his disease baffled all human exertion, and he gradually sunk under the disorder. Just previous to his death he had been under the charge of Dr. FELL, a young American physician in London, who has been very successful in his treatment of cancers. But the sculptor's disease was beyond the reach of mortal skill.

CRAWFORD has left behind him many noble works, which will preserve his name among the great artists produced by this country, but he has been cut down just as his fame was ripening, and, if he had lived, he would have justified all that his partial friends expected of him. Among the unfinished orders that he left were some for works to adorn the National Capitol at Washington.

DEATH OF MRS. DR. JAMES RUSH.—The telegraph announces the death of MRS. DR. JAMES RUSH, of Philadelphia, at Saratoga, after an illness of two months. This lady has occupied an eminent position in the fashionable world, viewed in its most generous and progressive aspect. Possessed of a masculine intellect and of a princely wealth, and married to one of the most accomplished as well as philosophically toned men in the country, her house, both on her own account and that of her husband, was liberally resorted to by clever people, domestic and foreign. It was not simply that her dwelling in Chestnut-street rivaled European palaces in inferior appointments of furniture, plate, china, and the severe Doric elegance of its decorations, but there were a woman and a man within who knew how to converse and how to entertain. Mrs. RUSH was one of the few relics of the old school, the daughter of Mr. RIDGWAY, the rival of GIRARD in acquiring a fortune in commerce. Dr. RUSH is the son of BENJAMIN RUSH, the signer of the Declaration of Independence, and the most celebrated physician of the last century, the fame of whose genius spread over Europe, and whose works were quoted by BYRON and rewarded by ALEXANDER I. of Russia. Of such good intellectual stock, Dr. RUSH maintained his celebrity by his work, "The Philosophy of the Human Voice," which has no rival in the English language for originality and profundity.

It is possible for persons of great wealth, who give parties, balls and receptions, to do a great deal of good by democratic ideas carried into the drawing-room. Mrs. RUSH, who had a horror of snobs and snobbishness, set to work to break down artificial distinctions. She invited whom she chose to her parties, provided their moral standing was good. The son or daughter of a retailer—of the tradesman who, in Europe, ranks along with the domestic—found, if worthy, a warm welcome to her weekly receptions and her balls. At Saratoga she eschewed all parade, and her example might be well followed by the overdoing candidates for social celebrity.

This liberal and catholic view of society was not inspired by any vital piety, as it is understood. Mrs. RUSH never went to church, or claimed to be religious. She was a great reader, a student, a linguist, took lessons on the piano-forte till the summer of her death, and was very exact in filling up the hours of the day properly. A great walker, rain or shine she could be seen in the streets of her native town. Every year she went to Saratoga regularly.

Mrs. RUSH was advanced in years, but, till the period of her last illness, was uninterruptedly seen in society.—Tribune.

Arrival of the Borussia.

The steamship Borussia, from Hamburg on 1st of October, arrived at this port yesterday morning. On the 5th inst., in a fearful hurricane when north of Scotland, the Borussia broke one blade of the propeller and proceeded to Greenock to repair. Finding at that port no dock sufficiently large for her accommodation, she went to Liverpool, from which port she sailed on the 14th. The Borussia lay to off Sandy Hook for 7½ hours waiting for a pilot. She brings 134 first and second cabin, and 320 steerage passengers. Her advices have been anticipated by the arrival of the Baltic.

Literary.

NEW HISTORICAL WORK ON THE REIGN OF THE LATE CZAR NICHOLAS.—A work on the advent to the throne of the Czar NICHOLAS I., edited by BARON DE KORFF, Secretary of State, Councillor of the Empire and Director of the Imperial Library at St. Petersburg, has recently appeared in the Russian Capital, where it has made considerable sensation. It has been compiled by direction of ALEXANDER II., from notes left by the late Czar, completed and explained by the correspondence of the imperial family, and by official acts which have remained until now buried in the archives of the Empire. Among these materials are an autographic memoir of NICHOLAS himself, a journal kept by his Empress, documents found among the papers of CONSTANTINE, notes left by the late Grand Duke MICHAEL, and papers forwarded by several personages connected with the insurrection of 1825. It thus forms an introduction to the history of the late reign, founded upon authentic documents, the majority of which have been secret up to the present time, and the remainder of which have been known only to a few persons. The French translation is completed, has been revised by Baron DE KORFF himself, and will soon be ready for publication. The German and English translations will be a little later. The Russian edition comprises 236 pages.

COSMOS.—A Congress of naturalists has just been held at Bonn. By a letter addressed to the President of this learned assembly, Baron ALEXANDER DE HUMBOLDT announces for next month the publication of the first part of the fourth and last volume of his Cosmos. The completion of this great work is an event calculated to deeply interest the learned world.

Sugar from the Chinese Cane.

The following letter, addressed to the Commissioner of Patents at Washington, contains information of a good deal of general interest, inasmuch as it shows that granulated sugar may be produced from the Chinese plant recently introduced into this country, and which had already been proved to be of so great value for the molasses it yields as well as for fodder for cattle:

VALLAMBROSA, Montgomery Co., Md., Tuesday, Oct. 20, 1857.

MY DEAR SIR: In addition to the small parcel of sugar I sent by mail, enclosed in my letter of the 3d inst., I to-day present your Bureau with another and better specimen of sugar obtained from the Chinese cane. The first parcel was made by my family in my absence, without note of measure of the liquid or extract or of time. Of the present sample I can speak more learnedly, as I witnessed the operation, from the cutting and and counting of the canes to the granulation and evaporation of the sugar. After topping and blading the canes, five hundred of them were cut in every stage of maturity, most of them very small, with unripe seed; twenty of them taken indiscriminately weighed 33½ lbs. They were hauled in an ox-cart two miles to a neighbor's house, who kindly permitted me to put up a cider mill which had not been used for two years, and was very dry and inefficient. Much of the juice was wasted, as the bed in which the rollers worked had no groove, having a level surface. The cane was passed twice through the mill, and I believe the greater part of the juice remained in the cane, the mill having been so long disused that it could not be keyed up to effect the requisite pressure. We carried home in a barrel five gallons of juice, into which were thrown two teaspoonfuls of slaked lime, dissolved in cold water, about the consistence of cream—according to the suggestion of Mr. BROWN, of the Agricultural Bureau, in the agricultural report of 1856—which rapidly disengaged various matters that were suspended in the liquid and were skimmed off. The greater part of the liquid was then measured and put into a bell-metal preserving kettle holding four gallons, and the remainder into an iron vessel belonging to the cooking-stove, which was inserted in its proper place, and the kettle, having no aperture to fit it, was placed over one of the holes of the stove, and did not for that reason boil as rapidly as the other. However, when that in the kettle was boiled down sufficiently, the contents of the smaller vessel were poured into the larger one. In about five hours from the point of ebullition the syrup I present in the pint bottle was dipped out, and the remainder continued boiling about half-an-hour longer, when it was poured into a cold tin pan. The scum that rose was removed at intervals of a few minutes, during the whole operation of boiling, by a perforated tin skimmer. A little over a gallon of delicious syrup was the fruit of our labors, covered with a thick coating of what my family considered very nice taffy. We were in despair about the sugar, and thought we only had syrup, and used it as such for three or four days, after which some particles of crystalized matter disclosed themselves—in all a little more than a teacup-full. The remainder of the syrup, which was filtered through a cloth, produced the articles of sugar and molasses which I herewith present.

So far the process would seem very simple; but the most careful may fail in his experiment. When the liquid is boiled down to about a fifth part of its original measure, or a little more, it must be carefully attended to, frequently dipping out and dripping the liquid over the side of the skimmer, when small globules will appear, and presently the rim of the skimmer will hold, suspended, a quantity of the syrup. About this point the violent ebullition which raises the liquid to the top of the vessel will have greatly subsided, when it should be poured off into another vessel. This last part of the process is the most important and the most difficult of description, and must be chiefly trusted to the practiced eye of the expert. It seemed to me that at this most important point, when the ebullition is most violent, more resembles the making of taffy, the molasses has reached its highest point of boiling. The liquid should not boil over the vessel, which may be prevented at any stage by dipping up part of the liquid and dropping it into the boiler.

Of the small bottle of syrup, of rather better quality than the first mentioned, I will give you the separate history. I had seventy-five of the ripest canes cut and passed three times through the same mill, and into which the lime was put immediately it came from the press, so that it may have disengaged the foreign matters more perfectly than when it was applied after the juice was carried the two miles. This may account for its superior quality. The juice yielded was two and a half gallons, which was boiled in one of the iron vessels of the cooking-stove, and formed the syrup in two hours and a half after it commenced boiling.

I have about two-fifths of an acre in the Chinese sugar-cane, which would not be sufficient inducement to engage in the erection of expensive machinery. I could not even procure the services of a mechanic to put up a common mill and grind my cane. Nor would I have gone to the great expense that some have incurred in erecting furnaces and boilers. I should succeed better, no doubt, with a furnace, as the juice requires concentrated heat and rapid boiling, and my cooking-stove was too open to secure these advantages; hence the longer time it required to obtain the syrup than has been taken by other experimenters.

I did not intend at this time, nor until further experiments had better qualified me for the task, to have troubled you with anything more than a verbal statement, but, as you desire it, I have prepared this imperfect and hasty sketch, hoping it may be in time to furnish some hints to those engaged in the same pursuit. I am your most humble servant. J. W. ANDERSON.

Hon. J. HOLT, Commissioner of Patents.

WORTHY OF CONSIDERATION.—The average annual imports of cotton and woolen manufactures are about fifty millions of dollars; the average annual imports of iron, manufactures of iron and steel are about twenty-five millions of dollars; the average annual imports of manufactures of silk are about twenty-five millions of dollars: total one hundred millions. There is no actual necessity for importing a dollar's worth of cotton and woolen goods, because we manufacture them ourselves; and there is no actual necessity for importing a dollar's worth of iron, because we have enough of that in Pennsylvania, Maryland and Virginia to supply not only ourselves, but the residue of the world; and there is no very pressing necessity to import so largely of manufactures of silk. Without entering into arguments, it is merely suggested that if the imports of the articles under these heads were reduced one-half—say fifty millions of dollars—there would be no occasion for panics and financial revulsions. Exporting fifty millions of dollars in gold per annum is a serious matter to any country; we can stand most things, but not that long. Importing fifty millions of gold annually is quite another affair, and this or any other country can stand that to the end of time, as under it there would be no panics and revulsions.—National Intelligencer.

Collector of Taxes.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

With reference to the publication by the Committee of the Corporation of my name among others as a debtor to the City, will you allow me to say: That I held by election of the people the office of Collector of Taxes for the First Ward, from 1833 to 1844, at a stated salary. In 1843, after I had given the required bonds for over $800,000 and commenced the labor of collecting, the Common Council passed a resolution reducing the salaries of all the City Collectors one-fourth. On settlement of my accounts for the year with the Comptroller, I returned the full amount of salary to which I deemed myself justly entitled, notwithstanding said resolution. Suit was afterwards brought against me for the difference, by WILLIS HALL, Esq., Corporation Attorney, and upon argument of the case by my counsel, G. M. SPIRA, Esq., Judge EDMONDS decided that the execution of the bond amounted to a contract which entitled me to the full amount claimed,—whereupon a certificate of final settlement of my accounts and discharge of my bond was given me by the Chamberlain, which was duly filed in the Comptroller's office, where it may possibly yet be found. Dreadful Lake Disaster—Loss of the Steamer Reindeer and all on Board.

From the Chicago Times, Saturday.

Masters of vessels which arrived at this port yesterday bring the sad intelligence of the total wreck of the Canadian steamer Reindeer, Captain PATTERSON, and the loss of all but two of the lives on board. The Reindeer ran between this port and Montreal. She cleared from this port on Friday, the 16th inst. with 13,000 bushels of wheat, consigned to parties in Montreal. On Monday night, when off Great Point Au Sauble, on the Michigan shore, she was met by a heavy gale, and Captain PATTERSON, finding that she would not weather it, hoisted all sail and headed for the shore. The moment she touched the ground the steamer commenced going to pieces, and owing to the distance from the beach and violence of the surf, only two persons succeeded in reaching the land. These are supposed to be firemen. All the others were lost. It is thought the steamer had but few if any passengers on board. The officers and crew numbered about 22 men. We are unable to give any of their names, except Captain PATTERSON. The Reindeer was an old boat, both in age and model. She was rated about 150 tons, British, equal to about 200 American. Her value was probably not to exceed $20,000.

The Atlantic's Mails—The Correspondence.

From the Star.

The following dispatch was telegraphed to the Postmaster General a few minutes before we went to press:

NEW-YORK, Oct. 24.—It is said that the Atlantic has broken her machinery, and will not be able to sail. Mr. VANDERBILT offers to take the mails and deliver them at Liverpool on the same terms as are allowed the Collins line. The Vanderbilt has steam up and is waiting your answer.

ISAAC V. FOWLER, P. M.

To which the following answer was returned from the Department:

WASHINGTON, 1 o'clock, P. M.—The responsibility of a failure is with Mr. COLLINS and the Navy Department. We have no funds to pay out of.

THE BLUE RIDGE TUNNEL.—In reply to statements that the tunnel through the Blue Ridge at Rockfish Gap, Va., is too small to admit the passage of the cars, and that it will take from three to eighteen months to enlarge it sufficiently, Mr. CROZET, the engineer of the work, publishes the following explanation:

"The tunnel is elliptical and closes in towards the top. It is not quite as easy to cut out a regular ellipse through veins of the hardest rock, as to whittle a pine stick; there is always some trimming of projecting points to do in the end. It is not possible to detect, with certainty, the jutting points in the way until a track is laid. Accordingly, as soon as this was done, I caused a frame of the full size of the largest Central Railroad cars to be made, 10 feet wide and 11½ high, and moved it along the track. In a few places its upper corner touched, and we set about removing these points. One-half of this small job is already done. On the level of the track there is ample room for our car and persons to stand on the side while it passes."

CASTLE GARDEN—ARRIVALS OF EMIGRANTS—CHOLERA AT QUARANTINE.—The number of passengers reported arrived at Castle Garden during the year, to October inst., was 146,071. The number in September was 20,187, including 861 American citizens returned from abroad. The number of passenger vessels arrived was 69. The number of vessels arrived in October to the 24th inclusive was 44, bringing 11,789 passengers. Yesterday the ship Louisa Thompson, from Liverpool, landed 649 passengers, and the Mercury 440. Since the 9th inst., four ships, the Rhine, the Dr. Barth, the Johann Elize and the John Bertram, have arrived from Hamburg, all of which have been quarantined on account of the prevalence of cholera among the passengers. The John Bertram, arrived Sunday, has lost 20 passengers by cholera. One death occurred on Sunday night. The ship will be thoroughly disinfected, and proper precautions taken to prevent the spread of the disease.

LOCAL FOREIGN MISSIONARY SOCIETY.—The thirtieth anniversary of the New-York and Brooklyn Foreign Missionary Society, auxiliary to the American Board of Commissioners of Foreign Missions, was held on Sunday evening in the South Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn. The annual address says that the Society is in a flourishing condition, though it is feared that the financial crisis may lessen the receipts of the ensuing year. The demand for the Gospel is increasing, particularly in Turkey and China. From the Treasurer's report it appears that the receipts from April 1, 1856, to July 1, 1857, were $38,338 47, and the expenditures during the same period $38,338 47, leaving the Society out of debt. Rev. Dr. SPEA closed the service with an eloquent sermon.

DEPARTURE OF THE DREADNOUGHT FOR IRELAND—A DANCING VESSEL.—The clipper ship Dreadnought, Captain SAMUELS, sailed for Liverpool on Saturday, with the largest cargo of passengers ever known to return on an emigrant ship—350. The Dreadnought has become famous for short passages, which may partly account for her full complement; but the band of music employed on board to "discourse" sweet music, and play the old familiar tunes of home, has had a share of influence, and should have credit. One female passenger, in the hearing of our informant, having secured her passage, told the Captain she was going to "buy a new pair of shoes, as her auld ones were not fit to dance in the whole voyage."

PASSING COUNTERFEIT MONEY.—Two Germans last evening passed at a Broadway hat-store a $10 counterfeit bill on the Gloucester Bank, Mass. The bill is well executed and likely to deceive good judges of money. The vignette represents several warehouses and ships loading and unloading at a dock. On the right there is a representation of a single vessel with ten on it in figures, and underneath a figure X. The parties have not been arrested.

The loss by the burning of the blanket mill of J. W. Springfield, of Lebanon, Me., on the 18th inst. was $11,000, insured for $3,300.

The valuation of taxable property in New-Orleans is $106,000,000.

MARINE COURT—MONDAY, Oct. 26.

Before Judge Thompson.

Pfeiffer & Tafel vs. Joseph Firkles.—The plaintiffs are lawyers at Stuttgard, and sue the Landlord of the Shakespeare Hotel, in this City, to recover about $500. In 1849 it appears that Firkles was indicted in Stuttgard for an insult to the Majesty of the King, for which he was arrested and imprisoned. The plaintiffs became his bail in the sum of 1,000 guilders. He subsequently left his native land and arrived here, and now sets up for defence that it is adverse to the genius of this Republic to admit any European entanglement with citizens of the United States. The Jury rendered a verdict for the plaintiffs for $480 and costs.

Delaney, Walter Edwards, Walter Farrington, Charles Hewett, Frank Jenks, Gilbert B. Lindsay, Henry A. Reeve, William Settle, Jr., Isaac L. Taylor, Charles B. Thornton and Waldo Abbott. J. M. Van Cott, George G. Lemberson and T. H. Rodman, Esqs., Examiners.

HOMŒOPATHIC MEDICAL SOCIETY OF THE COUNTY OF KINGS.—A law was enacted last Winter authorizing the Homœopathic Physicians in each of the several Counties in this State to organize themselves into County Societies; and conferring on them the same powers and privileges that are enjoyed by similar societies organized under the old laws which were passed before Homœopathy was born. After several preliminary meetings, the Homœopathic physicians of Kings County have organized a Medical Society in accordance with the above law. A constitution and by-laws were agreed upon a few evenings since, and the following persons chosen as officers of the Society:

President—ROBERT ROSMAN, M. D.
Vice-President—S. C. HANFORD, M. D.
Recording Secretary—B. C. MACY, M. D.
Corresponding Secretary—E. T. RICHARDSON, M. D.
Treasurer—J. DUFFIN, M. D.
Censors—F. P. WELLS, M. D.; A. P. HULL, M. D.; S. S. GUY, M. D.

DROWNED.—A deck hand named JEREMIAH DAWSON, employed on one of the Catharine ferry boats, was drowned Sunday evening. As he unhooked the boat he was precipitated into the dock, and life was extinct before assistance could be rendered.

BURGLARIES.—On the night of the 24th inst. house No. 17 Clinton-street, Brooklyn, was entered and robbed of a variety of clothing and $40 in money.

House No. 238 Clinton street was entered twice on Sunday night and robbed of gas fixtures, door knobs, &c.

THE LIQUOR SELLERS.—District-Attorney SCHOONMAKER has commenced suits against about three hundred liquor dealers in Brooklyn for selling on Sunday.

☞ The Police of Brooklyn made sixty-three arrests during the forty-eight hours ending yesterday morning.

S. C. HERRING & CO.'S PATENT CHAMPION SAFES.—The subscribers, grateful for past favors, and finding that a discriminating public were bestowing their patronage to that extent that more warerooms were necessary to exhibit all their stock, have enlarged their depot, by opening an extensive ware and sales room on Broadway, at No. 251, corner of Murray-st., opposite the City Hall. This enlargement of warehouse room, with the recent extensive enlargement of their factory, will enable the subscribers to keep on hand at all times a larger stock of fire and burglar-proof safes than any other establishment in the world. Particular attention will be paid to constructing safes for private families to match with other furniture, for the security of plate and jewelry. (And housekeepers are invited to call and examine for themselves.) Also, will keep on hand and make to order all kinds of money chests, vault doors and bank vaults. Hall's patent powder-proof locks for banks or store doors. Jones' patent permutation bank lock, and Crygier's patent letter lock, without key.

WAUPUN, Wis., Aug. 24, 1857.

Mr. LANSING BONNELL, Milwaukie.

Agent for Herring & Co.'s Patent Safes.

DEAR SIR: The Herring Champion Safe that I purchased of you, was in my store at the time it was burned last March. The heat was so great that it melted off the brass plates and knob on the front of the safe. The door was warped so badly from the heat, that I was obliged to cut it open. But I am happy to say to you, the contents of the safe were preserved to my perfect satisfaction.

NEW-YORK CITY.

The Board of Aldermen.

The Board of Aldermen met last evening. Alderman Hoffman in the chair. The first paper of interest was the following

COMMUNICATION FROM STEPHEN H. BRANCH.

To His Honor the Mayor, and Common Council of the City of New-York—GENTLEMEN: Your petitioner respectfully represents that your Finance Committee has received him with cordiality, for which he is extremely grateful, who requested him to get from the late Special Police Committee a certificate of the value of his clerical labor, which he cannot honorably do, after assuring you that he would not charge for services if you would return his expenses of $2,000 in procuring witnesses and record testimony in England and America; that sixteen months ago, a Committee of the Board of Councilmen recommended against this will the Board of Councilmen recommended against his will the payment of $4,560 for his expenses and services; the payment of $4,560 for his expenses and services; that in March last you almost unanimously paid the claim of Edward Van Raust, which your petitioner contracted for the Special Police Committee for the correspondence of witnesses before the Police Commissioners; that your procrastination has nearly brought attorneys; that your procrastination has nearly brought him to the poor-house and the tomb; that all he craves is $2,000 he kindly loaned you, if he can have it now, which will enable him to pay his creditors, who hold his notes for $1,720, and have $280 for himself, which he disbursed for you from his own scanty funds, which is about all he will require on this side of the grave; as, often when he goes to his nocturnal rest he never expects to behold the morning sun; that his toil and exposure to the hostile elements during the Police Investigation sealed his physical destiny; that he is utterly destitute and has no home because he cannot pay his board, for which he owes $100 to various persons and due to his washwoman, who cries because he does not pay her; that he cannot severely toil for a living, as his mirth is gone, his blood is dormant, his legs and arms are painful, his hands and feet are often cold and numb, and paralysis must soon transpire; that those to whom he was very kind in their early struggles, desert him now, and he has no desire to live after you have paid John H. Briggs, Thos. Carlisty, Alfred Carson, Samuel Sneden, Wm. Curtis Noyes, and the widow and orphans of Geo. Steers, who kindly loaned him $1,720, which he disbursed for you and which they need in these days of penury and gloom; that you should grant his just request, because he was faithful to you, and even pawned his watch in London while in your service, on whose dial was the likeness of his lamented father, whom he loved next to his God; that he placed other parental relics in the custody of pawnbrokers, for means to conduct the Police Investigation; that his dearest mementoes are in the hands of strangers, which is a painful sacrilege; that for nearly two years you had the use of the education his father gave him; that you have had all his money, have involved him in debt, and may soon be consigned his pauper coffin; that these mournful truths harrow his soul, and drown his reason, and rack his frame, and now, with his eyes fixed on the God of Justice, he again implores you to pay his claim without delay, and he will bless you in his morning and evening prayers, until his tongue is paralysed and his eyes are closed for ever.

STEPHEN H. BRANCH.

The communication was referred to the Finance Committee.

A communication was received from the Police Commissioners, in relation to the erection of a new Station-house for the Twenty-first Ward.

A communication was received from Joseph Hughes and Patrick Murphy, offering to clean the streets of the City, for $330,000 a year, payable monthly. It was referred to the Committee on Streets.

EMPLOYMENT FOR THE POOR.

The following resolution was offered by Alderman MOSPEDON:

Whereas, Various projects have recently been proposed, having for their object the employment of the laboring classes of this City during the approaching Winter; and

Whereas, The grading of Hamilton-square is a subject that has engaged the attention of former Common Councils, and the necessity for which is obvious to every person acquainted with its location, it being nearly twenty feet elevated above the grades of the adjoining streets and avenues; and

Whereas, Proposals have been made to this Board offering a premium for the privilege of being permitted to grade said square by responsible parties, the earth contained thereon being exceedingly valuable by reason of the many low and sunken lots in its immediate vicinity, and the general marshy and swampy character of the building property; therefore,

Resolved, That the Comptroller be and he is hereby authorized and directed to advertise for proposals for regrading and grading Hamilton-square, the contract to be awarded to such person or persons as will complete said work within the shortest time, and on terms the most advantageous to the City.

It was referred to the Committee on Finance.

The report of the Committee in favor of leasing to the Eastern Dispensary one half of the block of land on which their building now is, for 21 years at the nominal rent of one dollar a year, was adopted.

The report of the Committee concurring in favor of remitting assessments for opening Central Park, charged on property of the Anshi Heset (Jewish) congregation, was adopted. The property assessed is a burial ground.

The reports in favor of and against the removal of the steamboat landings to above Canal-street on the west, and Grand-street on the east side of the City, were called up.

Alderman WILSON moved the adoption of the minority report—against the removal of the landings.

Alderman SZERS made a forcible speech in favor of the removal, and when he had concluded, the whole subject was laid over, and the Board adjourned to Thursday next.

Board of Councilmen.

The Board of Councilmen met on Monday, the President, J. N. PHILLIPS, Esq., in the Chair.

REPORT ON THE OFFICE OF THE COMPTROLLER.

A resolution was offered to print the report of the Special Committee on the Comptroller's Department.

Councilman OTTARSON observed that the report had been printed in all the daily papers. All persons had read the report.

Councilman HASWELL wished the report to be read in authentic shape.

Councilman MCCAHILL moved an amendment that two thousand be ordered instead of one thousand printed copies.

The motion to print was lost for want of a constitutional vote. Laid on the table. The report was ordered to be made special for Thursday.

CENTRAL PARK.

A resolution was adopted, calling on the Commissioners of the Central Park to state why they do not pay the salaries of the Surveyors.

WORK FOR UNEMPLOYED POOR.

A memorial was received, headed as follows:

"Professor Jupiter Z. K. M. Hesser prays most respectfully the honorable City Fathers in general, in the name of fifty thousand honest and industrious working men, now without business, with about 200,000 persons in their families, for immediate work in the Central Park, in opening, grading and cleaning streets and roads, in erecting public buildings, docks and sewers, to earn some money to save themselves next Winter from starvation, or worse than death, from degradation."

The substance of the memorial was so inarticulately read by the Clerk, that it was utterly impossible to report it. Upon debate,

Referred to the Special Committee on the Mayor's Message.

IMPROVEMENTS, AND HOW TO PAY FOR THEM.

An ordinance of the Board of Aldermen authorizing the issue of $250,000 bonds, to pay for improvements in Central Park, came up for concurrence. It was at first referred to the Committee on Lands and Places, but the reference was reconsidered. Councilman JONES spoke in favor, not of a reference to the Committee on Finance, inasmuch as he believed that every member knew all about the subject, but that it be laid on the table, so that it could be taken up at the next or some subsequent meeting. This course was finally adopted.

A communication from Harvey Hart, formerly Receiver of Taxes, was referred to the Special Committee. Its drift was his exculpation from such implications as might arise personally to himself from the report of the Special Committee on the investigation of the Finance Department. He stated that the books were balanced upon his retirement from office. He returned to the Clerk of Arrears (with the consent of the Comptroller) the sum of $102,515 42 of those arrears remaining uncollected, and he had been informed that he had not been credited with that amount, so it would appear he had overpaid the City no less than $14,000, the same being credited to him in the Comptroller's books. He says:

"This apparent discrepancy in my accounts was occasioned by the collection of disputed taxes by the different Counsel to the Corporation, and the payment thereof by them directly into the City Treasury, the same being credited to me on the books, but not having been paid to me, it did not appear on my books. It is true the Comptroller directed me to so credit these amounts, but not deeming such a course to be legal I declined doing so unless the same was received by me. These circumstances are well known to the Comptroller."

The report of the Committee in favor of lighting Harlem with gas was called up and adopted.

The Board then adjourned to Thursday.

Committee on Proposed Foundling Hospital.

The Committee of the Board of Councilmen, to whom was referred the reception of evidence upon the proposed formation of a Foundling Hospital in this City, met in the City Hall on Monday afternoon, Councilman HASWELL in the Chair. Only five persons were present; three of whom addressed the Chair.

Doctor WOOD, of Bellevue Hospital, being called on by the Chair, asked for time to mature his views before expressing any decided opinion as to the propriety of the step. The matter ought to be looked at with great caution, both in a moral and in a philanthropic point of view. In his opinion the time would undoubtedly arrive when such an institution would of necessity be established. A kindred subject was the prevalence of prostitution now in course of investigation by a friend of his attached to one of the public Hospitals. He (Doctor WOOD) would like to consult his colleagues before committing himself to a very decided opinion. He thought that many who now opposed such a step would ultimately be found eager for its adoption. An examination of the statistics of the population of New-York would lead to the conclusion that something ought to be done. The Doctor pledged himself to speak more definitely on some future occasion.

Mr. H. W. FIELD was afraid the balance of good would be against the proposal. He detailed some of the steps connected with the working of the Foundling Hospital in London, explaining that some modification of the indiscriminate offer of children in the box at the gate had been rendered necessary long ago. He asked if the Committee were authorized to consider and report. Let this movement originate and be supported by private charity. Unasked and uncalled, the Common Council by this step were actively initiating the people into pauperism. Where was the money to come from to support such an institution? The amount of property that was taxable was daily becoming less. Where were the taxes or its support to come from? Would it not be better to wait? Instead of "relieving" people, it would be more rational to reduce the general amount of taxation, and none felt its burden more severely than the middle classes. The speaker proceeded to detail several instances where eleemosynary aid had been distributed without the exercise of proper judgment, and asserted that those families who were in greatest need of aid were always the last to ask for it. But this movement would increase taxation, and thus add to the existing amount of social evil

Dr. HASKIN then addressed the Committee. A stigma naturally attached to every man who made a move which, in the opinion of some people, had a tendency to the encouragement of crime. This was not an isolated question. It was closely related to the crime of prostitution. Prostitution in large cities could only be met in one of two ways—either by its entire suppression, which was impossible, or by regulation, as in European cities. He doubted the propriety of agitating the question under present circumstances. The tax-payers were almost riotous. A private establishment might be tolerated. In the English Foundling Hospitals the children received were divided into classes, and some were marked, so as to be reclaimable at some distant day. Doubtless many persons in pardonable distress would be glad for a temporary asylum for their infant offspring. There was a close connection between prostitution and the establishment of Foundling Hospitals that would prove to be inseparable. It was impossible to separate them when once organized. Then came the question, How far would the proposed establishment, while it effected some good, add to the existing amount of prostitution? He would advise the Committee to wait the action of the Board of Governors in this matter. He could state that it was in contemplation to call together a few influential persons to see what could be done in the erection of a private charity. Why, only that very day, the papers stated two cases where children had been found in two different privies. And medical men, qualified men, too, were some of them so unprincipled as to invent and use efficient instruments wherewith they produced abortion. It was not possible to bring the crime home to them, excepting in a few bungling cases, where criminal skill had been deficient. Now the strict moral disciplinarian would say, that if a female had lost her chastity, she is not an object of compassion, and must be held amenable, and must bear all the consequences of the loss of position and character. Was it so? The matter was one of equal delicacy and difficulty, and ought to be approached with care and deliberation.

Doctor MCNULTY thought that a Foundling Hospital judiciously organized and conducted would do away with a frightful amount of open crime. There were few medical men to whom the proposal had not at some time or other been made to procure abortion, under circumstances occasionally of great temptation. No right-minded man would for a moment listen to such proposals, but they were sadly too common, and it argued great public depravity. It might be said that to many women, debarred from society by accidental criminality, no resource is left but the streets. If such exposure could be prevented, many young females might be restored to society, and one of the great sources of prostitution would be cut off. It had been contended that medical men ought to interest themselves in the matter. They were not likely to do so for obvious reasons—first because of the odium of the supposition that they were catering for notoriety, and still more, because in truth they had enough to do to attend to their own private business. In conclusion, he expressed his opinion that upon the whole a Foundling Hospital was imperatively demanded, but thought that the present was anything but an auspicious period for the attempt at its formation. The Committee then adjourned, the Chairman stating that it would be called together again so soon as Doctor WOOD sent him word that he was prepared to afford him the deliberate opinions of his professional friends.

NEW-JERSEY.

Trial of Frederick Cueva for the Murder of Oscar De Granval.

HUDSON COUNTY COURT.

Judge OGDEN Presiding, with Associate Justice MORRIS.

The Hudson County Court of Oyer and Terminer was opened yesterday morning at 10 o'clock, and the case of the young Cuban, FREDERICK CUEVA, indicted for the murder of OSCAR DE GRANVAL, in Hoboken, on the evening of the 8th of July last, was taken up. The counsel engaged in the trial are: For the State, Prosecuting-Attorney J. DUNN LITTELL, assisted by Attorney-General WM. L. DAYTON and E. R. V. WRIGHT, Esq. For the defence, Messrs. A. O. ZABRISKIE and I. W. SCUDDER, of Jersey City, and J. M. LYONS, of Hoboken.

Notwithstanding the storm, the Court room, at the opening, was crowded with people, manifesting much interest in the trial.

Immediately after the opening of Court, the prisoner was conducted inside the bar by Sheriff BEATTY, and took a seat beside his counsel, when the impanneling of the Jury was at once commenced. This occupied about an hour, and from a panel of 48 jurors the following were selected and sworn in:

John Sylvester, Adrian Post, Jacob Lassing,
Jons. V. Thurston, John J. Ludlow, James Wilson,
Asa Clark, Henry Van Emberg, M. D. Vreeland,
Robert Allen, Charles Phillips, D. R. Van Riper.

The case was then opened in behalf of the State by Mr. LITTELL, who, after reading the indictment, gave a detailed history of the circumstances connected with the affair. The following evidence was then taken:

M. Angela Birmingham sworn—I reside at No. 3 Hudson Terrace, Hoboken; I am a student and teacher of the smaller boys in Mr. De Granval's schools; I have been there three years; I know the prisoner, Frederick Cueva; I first made his acquaintance in September, 1856, upon his entering Mr. De Granval's school; Cueva came from Cuba; he left the school toward the latter end of January; I saw Cueva upon the evening that Mr. De Granval was shot; I was in the court-yard of No. 3 Hudson Terrace when I saw him; the members of Mr. De Granval's family, and some of the boys of the school were also in the yard at the same time; Miss Marsette was visiting there, and was upon the stoop, or in the court-yard at the time; I was standing near the gate; the deceased was in some part of the yard at the time; he was behind me at the time, talking to his brother; when I first saw Cueva, he was coming towards the house from the direction of the plank-walk leading to the ferry; he came and spoke to one of the boys; the boys were at the gate; Cueva then passed in front of the house, back and forth, several times; when he passed the gate he would throw a sidelong look at those in the yard; when he first came in front of the house he did not have a cane in his hand; he left, and went in the direction of the Bloomfield Academy, where he resided, going north up Hudson-street, and turning into Newark. [The witness here gave the location of Bloomfield Academy, and stated the most direct route to it from Mr. De Granval's house.] After Mr. Cueva left and went in the direction of his residence, he returned again, and had a cane in his hand; I never saw him with a cane before that day; I cannot describe the cane; he passed the house of Mr. De Granval, and at some remark made by Mr. Leopold De Granval to the deceased, which I did not hear, Cueva turned and faced the yard, and made some remark; I did not hear what he said; he was about three feet from Mr. De Granval's gate, when he made the remark; Mr. Leopold De Granval asked him what he wanted there; Cueva made some retort, but I do not remember what he said; so much was said by both parties that I do not recollect what was said: the general character of what Cueva said, as well as I could judge, was asking one of the De Granvals out to fight; at one time he addressed this invitation to Oscar; Mr. Oscar De Granval went outside the gate and stood with his hands behind him in front of Cueva, and asked him "What will you do?" Cueva then pointed his cane toward Ferry-street, and said, "Come, come;" Oscar then went inside the gate, saying as he went, "Do you think I would fight with such a person as you?" as Cueva went off shaking his cane threateningly he said, "bah;" Oscar replied "I have no cane to shake with you;" this is the last I saw of Cueva that night; after he went away I went into the house and do not know how long Oscar remained in the yard; I did not see him again until the next morning after he had been shot.

Cross-examined by Scudder—When Cueva first passed the house he made a passing remark to one of the scholars, Andrew Terry; Andrew was standing at the gate at the time; I think the remark was an ordinary one of recognition; I think Oscar De Granval, at this time, was standing on the steps in the court-yard; Leopold De Granval then came up to Andrew Terry as Cueva was going off, and reminded him that he was forbidden to speak to Cueva; I think the remark Leopold De Granval made was, "You know you should not speak to him;" when Cueva heard that he turned back and walked in front of the house; Oscar was then in the court-yard; I can't say what part of it; no one spoke to Cueva as he was going by the house south; at that time there were some swine passing; Oscar called Cueva's attention to the swine, comparing him (Cueva) with the swine; Oscar pointed toward them so that Cueva must have seen him point; I think the remark Oscar made was, "Look, there are your brothers;" Cueva could understand the English language; Cueva then said something to Oscar about the swine; can't say in what direction the swine were going; this was not the first remark that Oscar made to Cueva; this remark was made by Oscar after he had been outside the gate and came into the yard again; it was a pleasant Summer evening; I did not hear Oscar call Cueva a monkey; there were a number of expressions then made on both sides, beside that relative to the swine, but I do not recollect any of them; I did not hear the remark that Leopold made to Oscar, as I was talking to one of the boys at the time; I inferred that it was a joking remark, as I saw them laughing; Cueva was passing by the house at the time; I do not know whether or not the remarks that were made were made in relation to Cueva; they were standing near the middle of the yard with their faces toward Cueva; Cueva's calling Oscar out to fight was after these jocose remarks; Cueva asked what they were laughing at, to which, I think, there was an answer made by one of the De Granvals, but I do not know which one of them; there were three replies on both sides which I do not remember. [The witness here detailed the circumstances of Cueva shaking his cane, De Granval's going out the gate and confronting him, and other matters, the same in substance as given in the direct examination.]

Charles Wehle was next sworn. He was the architect employed to make a map of the premises and surroundings of the scene of the murder, and testified to the correctness of the map exhibited in Court, as to situations and distances.

M. Angelo Birmingham, being recalled by the defence, testified that the persons that were in the yard at the time spoken of were Madame De Granval, Miss Marsette, Leopold De Granval, Oscar De Granval, Louis Roy, Andrew Terry, Felix Preston, Geo. Shultz, Pepe Terry and myself.

Lorenzo W. Elder, M. D., sworn—I am a practicing physician, residing in Hoboken; I knew Oscar De Granval in his lifetime; I saw him on the night preceding the day of his death, lying upon the sidewalk in front of Washington-terrace, nearly opposite Mr. Broadhead's gate, (No. 11;) he was lying near the outer edge of the sidewalk; this was between the hours of eleven and twelve in the evening; he was lying upon the walk bleeding, speechless and insensible; his head was resting on a pillow; he was removed from there to his home, No. 3 Hudson-terrace; I accompanied him when he was removed; I left him about two o'clock the next morning; his condition while I was with him was the same as when I found him; I saw him again at ten o'clock the next morning; he died at three o'clock on the afternoon of the 9th of July; after death I held a post-mortem examination on the body, assisted by Dr. Chabert; when I first found him upon the sidewalk I did not examine his wounds; I did this after he had been removed to the house; I found a wound upon the left temple, located half-way between the angle of the eye and the ear; there were no other marks of violence; on the post-mortem examination, I found, after removing the scalp, a fracture of the skull corresponding with the external wound; upon removing the skull, found the wound extending into the brain to the depth of about three inches; in the substance of the brain I found splinters of bone; at the extremity of the wound we found a leaden ball; we examined other portions of the body, and found the organs healthy; did not examine the heart; the wound made by the leaden ball, in my judgment, caused his death. [The pistol-ball was here shown to witness and identified.]

Romer F. Shabert, M. D., sworn—I am a physician, practicing in Hoboken; I was present at the post-mortem examination spoken of by Dr. Elder, and his statement agrees with my recollections as to the facts of the examination; in my judgment, the cause of Oscar De Granval's death was a gun-shot wound in the head.

Miss Louisa Marsett, sworn—I reside at No. 94 Orchard-street, New-York; I am acquainted with the family of Mr. De Granval; I was at their house on the 7th of July; this was Tuesday; on the 8th, the day following, I was at tea there, about 7 o'clock, with the boys; the boys left the table before I did; about a quarter after 7, Madame De Granval and myself went out in the court-yard; the two brothers De Granval and the scholars were in the yard, standing inside the railing; while I was there, I saw a young man approaching who had a cap on; could not distinguish the features; when I first saw him, he was just south of the gate, shaking his hand toward Oscar, saying, "Come out here and I'll fight you;" Oscar replied, "Me fight such a little thing as you;" Oscar then left the railing and came toward his mother and myself; he told us that it was young Cueva; Cueva was going backward toward Ferry-street when Oscar made the remark about fighting "such a little thing as you;" Cueva then returned a step, brandishing a cane, and again dared Oscar to fight; Oscar then said, "I have not a cane to compete with you," or something to that effect; Cueva then went away, and Oscar's mother and myself went up on the stoop; Oscar got chairs for us to sit on; Leopold De Granval, who had a large Newfoundland dog, then came up, and said he was going to give the dog a bath off the dock at the Atlantic Garden; he started with the dog, and when he was crossing Ferry-street I saw Cueva come from the direction of Washington-street and follow behind him; Oscar remained with us on the stoop, and at nine o'clock asked his mother and myself to walk around the block, which we did; upon our return Oscar came into the house, and remained until the gas was lighted, when we left to go to Mr. Charles'. the next I saw of him was when he was brought into the house; I have stated all that I recollect in regard to the conversation in the yard; there might have been many other things said which I did not hear.

Cross-examined by Mr. Scudder—At the time I saw Cueva coming toward the house, the scholars and the Messrs. De Granvals were in the yard; I did not see Cueva have a cane the first time he came up; when he came back the second time he had a cane; I did not see the swine in the street; after Oscar said, "I have no cane to compete with you," Cueva went toward Ferry-street; Oscar remained with us; I saw Cueva at the entrance to the Atlantic, behind Leopold as he went in with the dog; Cueva did not follow him in; I did not hear the expression by either of the Mr. De Granvals toward Cueva that he was a monkey; I did hear Oscar say to Cueva that the pigs were his brothers; I do not know what was said between them before I came out.

Direct resumed—The cane I saw in Cueva's hand had a round head; I think the top was black.

Frederick Peltegaard, sworn—I reside in Hoboken; I know Cueva; I remember the time when Oscar De Granval was shot; I knew Cueva to carry a pistol previous to that time; I saw the pistol that night, after the affray; I would know the pistol if I were to see it now; I saw it that night at the Station, in possession of the Justice, Mr. Whitley. [The pistol was shown to witness and identified.]

Cross-examined—I have known Cueva to carry this pistol since January last; he was in the habit of carrying it when he went out at night.

Direct by Attorney-General—Cueva got the pistol after he left Mr. De Granval's school; I do not know whether it was immediately after or not.

Thomas W. Whitley, sworn—I, as Coroner, held the inquest upon the body of Oscar De Granval; the pistol exhibited was handed to me on the night of the arrest; I was present at the post-mortem examination, and the ball exhibited here I saw taken from Oscar De Granval's brain; it was handed to me by Dr. Elder; I have a cane in my possession which was given me by Miss Tompkins; I made application at Mrs. Tompkins' house for Cueva's cane, and this (holding up a whalebone cane) is the one handed to me; I have in my possession a hat said to have been worn by Oscar De Granval on the night of the affray; I have had it since the time of the inquest [the witness here exhibited the hat in question, which was a Panama, and the rim upon one side had been considerably cut or broken;] I did not see blood upon Cueva's pants the night that he was arrested; I was spoken to on the subject of the blood upon the pants, and have since seen a diagram of the spot of blood spoken of as discovered upon his pants.

At 4 o'clock, the Court adjourned until 9 o'clock this morning. Two officers were appointed to take charge of the Jury during the night.

MONDAY, Oct. 26—P. M.

The Official averages of the Banks in the City of New-York for the week ending on Saturday last, Oct. 24, the particulars of which are advertised by each Bank separately on another page of this paper, present, in the aggregate, the following changes from the previous weekly statement of Saturday, Oct. 17:

Decrease in capital	$300,000
Decrease in Loans	1,269,339
Increase in Specie	2,168,125
Increase in Undrawn Deposits	5,448,608
Decrease in Circulation	1,202,702

Including the operations of the Clearing-House, which, for the week, found the low average of $9,656,478, and the Sub-Treasury statement of Saturday afternoon, the following is the general comparison with last week, and also with the corresponding week of last year:

COMPARATIVE RECAPITULATION.

	Oct. 25, 1856.	Oct. 24, 1857.	Oct. 17, 1857
Capital	$54,243,000	$63,519,000	$63,819,000
Loans	104,155,463	95,975,467	97,245,825
Specie	10,580,795	10,011,335	7,843,210
Circulation	8,649,802	6,884,739	8,087,441
Gross Deposits	89,465,152	87,801,098	82,894,623
Exchanged	24,788,696	9,656,478	10,198,611
Undrawn	58,696,456	48,144,620	42,696,012
In Sub-Treasury	13,816,654	5,835,209	5,514,496

The statement is a strong one for the Banks, and the further liquidation in loans, when the sum reported by the Grocers' Bank last week and not reported this, is taken off, is less than apprehended. A number of the large Banks ran up their line quite considerably, among others, the Metropolitan, American Exchange, Merchants', &c. We have subjoined to the official table, for the convenience of comparison, a list of the loans of each bank as they stood upon the statement of last week. The addition to the specie line is even greater than generally anticipated from the low ruling of Gold in the market. Most of the parcels now taken to bank are left on general account, the difference against the ordinary currency being too trifling to make a special deposit an object. The City circulation has gone down quite rapidly. This is mainly from the voluntary practice adopted of substituting country money in payments across the counter. The policy of withdrawing the City notes is not a general one, some of the banks holding it to be their interest now and on resumption to sustain a good circulation of their own. The addition to the Deposit line is unexpectedly large.

The accounts from Europe by the Baltic, though bad for the other side, are not construed here as calculated to add to our own embarrassments. The Stock market strengthened on the news, and left off this afternoon quite firm, at an advance of 1@2 ℔ cent., and in some instances 3@4 ℔ cent. on the sales of Saturday. New York Central opening at 58½ rose to 60½@61, and Illinois Central bonds, which were done at 64 on Saturday, were in demand at 67½@68 ℔ cent. The shares were also 3 ℔ cent. higher, leaving off at 80½ ℔ cent. The Western Roads were generally stronger, and State stocks quite steady and 2 ℔ cent. higher on Virginias.

With the discount brokers there is a little business doing in paper to-day at 18@30 ℔ cent., though the number of buyers is greatly reduced of late. The Domestic exchanges are better on Philadelphia, 95@95¼; and worse on Baltimore, 91@92 ℔ cent. Boston and New England funds 99¼@99¾. Gold is dull with the brokers at 100½@100¾ buyers, and 101@101½ sellers. Part of the receipts by the Baltic go directly to New-Orleans by steamer Black Warrior, to purchase cotton. In foreign bills, to-day, holders are stiffer in their pretensions. London is held in some cases at 105@106; the whole range is 103@106.

Part of the private letter mail by steamer Baltic went to Boston by misdirection, much to the annoyance of one or two of the banking houses here. The private letters received denote less excitement on the other side in regard to the sudden change in the English money market than the newspaper speculations, but very considerable surprise is expressed at the continued embarrassment on this side. Merchant passengers who returned home by the Baltic were not prepared to find the banks suspended or the mercantile failures so largely increased since the dates last received in England before the steamer sailed. We hear of the return of no bills by this opportunity. The orders for Cotton and Stocks are said to be on a liberal scale.

There were telegraphic advices in the Street to-day that the Bank of Missouri had suspended specie payments this forenoon. The other St. Louis banks that had been holding out will probably follow this example.

BANK SUSPENSIONS IN ST. LOUIS.

ST. LOUIS, Monday, Oct. 26.

The Bank of the State of Missouri, the Merchants' Bank and the Southern Bank suspended specie payments this morning. The Mechanics' Bank is still firm.

THE GOVERNOR OF GEORGIA AND THE BANKS.

WASHINGTON, Monday, Oct. 26.

The Governor of Georgia, as the session of the Legislature is so near, withholds any action against the Banks, in consequence of their suspension of specie payment.

STATEMENT OF THE RHODE ISLAND BANKS.

PROVIDENCE, R. I., Monday, Oct. 26.

The following is the statement of the Rhode Island Banks not including this city, up to Oct. 19.

Circulation	$1,966,513	Loans	$8,377,899
Deposits	833,421	Specie	127,747

North Carolina State Bonds.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

The recent notice of the North Carolina State Treasurer, that he would anticipate the payment of the January interest, if the coupons were sent to him at Raleigh, has been wrongly construed to mean that the interest will not be paid on the regular day in New-York. Such is not the case, and I authorize you to state that the North Carolina interest due in New-York January 1 and July 1, will be promptly met at the Bank of the Republic, in any event.

Yours, respectfully,

J. M. MOREHEAD.

The above is from Ex-Governor MOREHEAD, of North Carolina, whose assurances on the subject may be relied upon.

Bank Stockholders.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

It has been repeatedly asserted in the newspapers that our Banks have not done a legitimate business; that their Directors have been the heaviest borrowers, etc. It appears to me that these statements should be inquired into at once, and the facts elicited. I apprehend that the stockholders have trusted too much to the wisdom of the Directors, and have paid too little attention to their own interests. Directors generally reflect themselves, and as it is now known to be a fact that several Presidents and Directors have recently failed, it is probable that some of our Banks are just now suffering from this cause. If the stockholders in our various Banks and Railroads would attend to the election of Directors and exercise more vigilance in examining into their details, I am persuaded that they would save themselves in many instances from loss in depreciated stock.

There are some of our Banks whose annual elections take place in November. Will not the stockholders attend and carefully scrutinize the list of officers to be proposed? Let them look out for speculators and risky operators. A STOCKHOLDER.

The Connecticut Banks.

To the Editor of the New-York Times:

For the Connecticut Banks to redeem their notes in New-York funds is the same thing to them as to redeem in specie, hence the arrangements made by the Metropolitan and Suffolk Banks in regard to New-England currency places the Connecticut Banks in a position harassing to themselves and ruinous to their customers. The sooner they take measures to extricate themselves from the unreasonable demands now made of them the better will it be for the Connecticut public. These Banks are held to the most strict account by the State Bank Commissioner, and it is universally conceded that no institutions in the country are conducted with more ability or stricter integrity. They did not suspend specie payment until New-York gave way, and they are ready to resume whenever New-York or Boston will.
